Incumbent Government Should Stand Firm to Avoiding Issues

January 06, 2015

A fghanistan is a nascent democratic state, governed by ruling elites, consisting of some powerful political parties, and inhabited by a diverse cultural and ethnic composition. The government must go this step to enter into next stage of getting across problems. Some of the pending problems are highlighted below:

- Afghan government is weak: Afghan government faces a serious challenge of security, governance, and development. The government has been unable to provide basic services to its citizens, such as education, healthcare, and infrastructure. As a result, many Afghans are forced to rely on the black market to meet their basic needs.
- Lack of political stability: Afghanistan has experienced a series of political crises and instability, including the 2001 coup, the war against the Taliban, and the 2009 election crisis. This has undermined the legitimacy of the government and its ability to govern.
- Economic challenges: Afghanistan is one of the poorest countries in the world, with a high rate of unemployment and poverty. The government has struggled to address these economic challenges, leading to widespread discontent among the population.

The government must address these issues in a timely and effective manner, ensuring that it can maintain its hold on power and continue to govern. It must also work to build trust and confidence among the Afghan people, who have suffered under decades of conflict and instability. The government must focus on providing basic services, promoting economic development, and ensuring political stability. Failure to do so could lead to another round of conflict and instability in the region.

Western-Backed Syrian Opposition Body Elects New Leadership

STANFORD - Syria’s Western-backed Syrian National Council (SNC), an opposition group that has been described as moderate, has elected a new president in a step that would allow it to join the United States in its efforts to negotiate with the Damascus regime.

The move, announced by the SNC’s president, Ahmad al-Jarba, is significant because it paves the way for a possible Syrian political transition.

The SNC, which was formed in 2011, has been criticized for its lack of a clear strategy and for its failure to unite the Syrian opposition.

The move is intended to strengthen the opposition’s position in negotiations with the government.

The SNC has been meeting with the United States and other Western countries to discuss a potential political solution for Syria.

The move is also expected to increase pressure on the Syrian government to engage in serious talks.

Sanctions on Russia Should Be Lifted If Progress Noted: France

PARIS - French President Emmanuel Macron said Monday that his country would support the lifting of sanctions on Russia if there is “substantial progress” in the conflict in Ukraine.

Macron, who is meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin in Paris on Tuesday, said he was in favor of lifting the sanctions if there is “serious progress” in the talks.

The sanctions were imposed in 2014 after Russia annexed Crimea from Ukraine.

The talks are aimed at finding a political solution to the conflict in eastern Ukraine.

Islamic Leader Uruges Muslims to Visit Jerusalem Holy Site

JERUSALEM - The head of the Islamic Organization for Palestine and the Arabs, Mahmoud Abbas, called on Muslims to visit Jerusalem’s holy site to demonstrate their love for Islam and their solidarity with the Palestinian people.

Abbas, who visited the site on Monday, said it was a “sacred place” and a “symbol of the Arab and Muslim identity.”

The holy site, known as Al-Aqsa, is a major pilgrimage site for Muslims.

The site is considered by Muslims to be one of the holiest places in the world.

The visit comes amid tensions in the region following the killing of a Palestinian teenager by Israeli soldiers.

Bahrain Extends Detention of Leading Activist

NABAMA - The head of the Bahraini Human Rights Commission, Nabeel Rajab, has been extended his detention by one week, according to reports.

Rajab, who is a prominent human rights activist, was arrested in April 2019.

The Bahraini government has accused Rajab of posting offensive comments on social media.

The government has repeatedly denied reports of human rights abuses in the country.

At least 138 Journalists Killed in 2014: Report Updates

GENEVA - The year 2014 has become the second deadliest year on record for journalists, with 138 journalists killed, according to a new report.

The report, published by the Committee to Protect Journalists, said the number of journalists killed worldwide in 2014 was the highest since the group began tracking such deaths in 1996.

The report also said that 90% of the journalists killed were local reporters.

The report also highlighted the dangers faced by journalists covering conflict zones, particularly in Syria and Iraq.

In up to 80% of cases, journalists were killed by armed groups.

EU Welcomes Re-Opening of U.S. Market for Beef Imports

BRUSSELS - The European Commission has welcomed the reopening of the U.S. market for beef from the European Union (EU).

The commission said it was pleased with the decision to lift the ban on beef imports from the EU.

The ban was imposed in 2003 due to concerns aboutmad cow disease.

The ban was lifted in 2014 after the EU and the United States reached an agreement on beef safety.

Lebanon Issues Ruling on Entry of Syrian War Fighters

BEIRUT - The Lebanese government has issued a ruling on the entry of Syrian fighters into the country.

The ruling, issued by the Ministry of the Interior, prohibits the entry of Syrian fighters without a permit.

The move comes amid concerns that Syrian fighters could be used to fuel tensions in Lebanon.

The ruling also bans the entry of Syrian fighters who have been involved in the Syrian war.
Civil Society Warns to Ask Citizens Take to the Streets

KABUL - As the government is delaying the formation of cabinet till the committees, the civil society activists have now warned to call on the citizens to take to the streets if the constitutional cabinet is not formed within two days. While only two days are remaining for the first 100 days of National Unity Government (NUG), the activists said in a press conference today in Kabul that the government leaders are still disputing on division of power.

SC Looks to Extend Term of Senate Chair Musliyar
