A civil war in Afghanistan is costing the Islamic Republic billions of dollars and increasing the pressure on the regime to come up with a solution acceptable to all sides. The United States and the United Nations have repeatedly warned of the risk of civil war in Afghanistan if the government fails to respond to the needs and demands of the Afghan people.

The US government has said that the Afghan government must take immediate steps to address the economic situation and ensure the provision of basic services to the people. The United Nations has also called for an immediate end to the fighting and the establishment of a cease-fire.

The humanitarian situation in Afghanistan remains critical, with many people displaced by the fighting and lacking access to basic services. The international community must continue to provide support to the Afghan government and people to help alleviate the suffering of those affected by the conflict.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex and multifaceted, requiring a comprehensive and sustained approach. The international community must work together to address the root causes of the conflict and to support a peaceful resolution.

Earlier, the Kabul residents had also complained of Corruption is a serious problem in Afghanistan, and the new government has made efforts to address it. However, many challenges remain. The country is still recovering from decades of war, and rebuilding infrastructure is a major priority. The government is working on projects such as the construction of roads, bridges, and schools. However, corruption continues to be a significant issue, and the government needs to continue to work towards reducing it. It is important to note that corruption affects not only the government but also the general population, and the government needs to work with the people to address this issue. The government has taken steps to combat corruption, such as implementing the Afghan Anti-Corruption Commission and the Afghan Independent Election Commission. The government also needs to continue to work with international partners to address corruption. It is important to note that corruption is not limited to the government, and the general population also needs to be aware of this issue and work together to address it. The government needs to continue to work towards reducing corruption and improving the lives of the people of Afghanistan.
