Finally NUG Announces Cabinet Nominees

Cabinet Nominees Woo Wolesi Jirga Members

KARUL - The National Unity Government (NUG) led by President Ashraf Ghani and CEO Abdullah Abdullah officially announced the much-expected list of minister-designates and the nominees for NUG and the Central Bank of Afghanistan. The announcement came on Monday after 109 days of negotiation which followed huge criticism from the Parliament and civil society groups. This comes as Ghani after taking oath as the new president on Sept. 29, promised during his mandate speech to form the cabinet within 45 days. According to a presidential decree announced at the event, the acting ministers would continue their duties until the new cabinet nominees receive a vote of confidence from Wolesi Jirga, Lower House of the Parliament. Besides the minister-designates, the government also introduced nominees at the level of the minister’s deputies (assistant ministers and provincial NUG and Do Afghanistan Bank, the central bank of the country. The two lists of the cabinet nominees introduced by Ghani are as follows:

Presidents Introduced by Ghani:
- Sher Mohammad Karimi as Minister of Defense
- Gulam Jalal Popal as Minister of Finance
- Fazel Mohammad Omran as Minister of Education
- Haibatullah Mohammadi as Minister of Interior
- Fazlullah K aromatic as Minister of counter narcotics
- Sardar Naderi as Minister of Labor, Social Affairs, ...

Women's Rights Violations on the Rise in Faryab: AIHR

MAIMANA - The Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission (AIHR) has expressed grave concern over a dramatic increase in violations of human rights in northwestern Faryab province. The AIHR regional head said most people of involved in human rights violations were still at large and could not be punished because of the lack of a will of the government and risk of losing high government positions. While speaking on the annual human rights report, Tadbir Mousavi, head of the civil society society’s report, Hanif Ali, a public representative from Nangarhar province, told AIHR that Afghan journalists had obvious pressure in their work. UNDP Welcomes SIGAR Report on ANP Payroll Data

NEW YORK CITY – The United Nations Development Program (UNDP) welcomed a new report from the US Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction (SIGAR) on collecting and verifying the accuracy of Afghan National Police (ANP) personnel and payroll data. UNDP agreed with the report’s analysis of the challenges faced by national and international partners in implementing, monitoring, and payroll processes for administration of the ANP. The Afghan national police – who significantly contribute to stability and security in Afghanistan – are being challenged despite the progress made under the post-2014 environment.

32 Welfare Projects Completed in Baghlan Province

KARJAN — A 12-year-old girl named Amina has been registered as the 32nd welfare project completed in Baghlan province.

Amina is a student of the first grade of the high school in the city of Karjan, Baghlan.

The project was implemented by the Ministry of Welfare and Social Affairs, and sponsored by the International Organization for Migration (IOM).

The project aims to provide educational opportunities for children and youth in the Baghlan province.

According to the IOM, the project is part of its efforts to support education in Afghanistan and promote social cohesion.

However, the situation in the region is still challenging, with ongoing security threats and displacement due to conflict.

In a statement, the IOM said: "We are committed to continue our efforts to support education in Afghanistan, especially for children and youth in areas affected by conflict and displacement."
Moralizing Children

ot how to help a child. Children who feel comfortable talking to their parents will also come to their parents for advice when they are little and when they get older, they will start to rebel against moral values and other important things that the parents teach and protect. This is not to be expected and parents should not be surprised when older children start to question moral values that they have been taught for years. If they were little and they were little and they were little, they would not be able to do such questions and challenges and be willing to answer them in a moral and sensible way.

Parents should never get angry at children who questions or even refuses to follow the rules and regulations of the family, however and the like. Getting angry will not encourage a child to want to listen to the parents or respect the parental influence. Children will see the parents as being contradictions in what parents have to say, it may make a child or teenager want to agree with their parents. It should be noted that the goal is not to make children say "yes," but to teach children to think rationally. Children must value moral values not only in the short term but also the long term. The only way to reach this goal is to convince children of their own accord to want to believe in a morally sensible world.

Everyone makes mistakes from children, who have been given a lot of freedom and opportunities. Unfair criticism cannot be made in the presence of parents. Children must learn from trust that is instilled in them. They should not be given to parents because they are not a small child but because parents have been in the same situation themselves. Children have the right to know that they are small children and have to be responsible for their actions.
