Real Factor of Security and Peace

By Dr. Hussen Yasa

The Afghan government has always been under the threat of war and insurgency. However, the recent months have seen a decrease in the violence and a rise in the peace talks. Despite this, the security situation remains fragile. The government needs to continue its efforts to secure the country and promote peace. The recent elections in Afghanistan have also shown the need for a strong and transparent government to ensure the stability of the country.

The security forces need to be strengthened and better equipped to deal with the threats. The government also needs to address the underlying causes of violence, such as poverty and inequality. The international community needs to provide continued support to the Afghan government in its efforts to achieve lasting peace.

The Afghan government should continue to work towards a more inclusive and representative political process. The recent peace talks have shown the possibility of a peaceful settlement. The government needs to ensure that the rights of all Afghans are respected and that the peace talks lead to a lasting solution.

The Afghan government should also prioritize economic development. The country needs a stable and prosperous economy to ensure peace and stability. The government should work towards creating a conducive environment for investment and job creation.

In conclusion, the Afghan government needs to continue its efforts to secure the country and promote peace. The international community needs to provide continued support and the Afghan government should prioritize economic development.

Govt. Should Devise Policies to Restrain Social Illos

Social ill is detrimental to the social bond of intensive interaction of industrial society, because it impairs the readiness to work. It is an essential and good practice for the people who have become society to that point that they became a part of that society. Today, we are being exactly the same. There are many factors that put down our social bond and make society turbulent. These factors can be defined in different dimensions, but broadly, they can be divided into three main categories. In each category, there are some factors that we need to address.

Social ill includes systematic injustice, social ill treatment, and social ill behavior. Many people are suffering from these problems. Many people are not aware of the facts. Many people have not realized the consequences of our actions.

The government should take immediate action to address these social ill behaviors. The government should work towards creating a strong social bond and a healthy society. The government should focus on educating the people about the importance of social ill and how it affects the society.

The government should also work towards creating a strong social bond and a healthy society. U.S. Military Must Get Ready to Deal with "Challenges": Hagel

WASHINGTON - U.S. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel urged the country's military top brass to prepare for "challenges" that could pose a threat to American national security. "The world is a more dangerous place," Hagel warned during a speech to U.S. service personnel in Thursday in the U.S. Army Ser- geant Major Academy in Fort Benning, Georgia.

Hagel mentioned threats such as "global instability in the Middle East and North Africa, the emergence of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, and the threat from the West and other countries." He also referred to the nation's security, accurately stating that the service members of the website of the Department of Defense had described the threats as the "new normal".

Fooling Every Attack is 'Extremely Difficult': Europl Chief

THE HAGUE - The number of radicalized Muslims across Europe, their command structure and grooming techniques has increased, making it "extremely difficult" for European intelligence agencies to fully root out threats, top security officials said on Thursday.

"The number of foreign fighters in Europe has increased," said Joachim Winter, member of the special committee on terrorism of the European parliament.

At least 2,500 and possibly up to 5,000 suspects have traveled from Europe to conflicts in Syria and Iraq, he said.

Terrorism experts all agreed that recent gains by the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria in those countries have made it more difficult for the police and the military to stop the attacks.

"We can do a lot more now than we did 10 years ago," said a general in the German police who heads efforts to counter extreme fights across the European Union.

When asked how the situation is evolving, the general said that the current situation is "very complex".

"A lot have been captured and more are on the way," he said.

"What is clear," Winter said, "is that we need to work together on the border of Turkey to prevent foreign fighters from entering the region."

"That's the main problem," he said. "We need to work together with states in Turkey to prevent foreign fighters from entering the region."
