Ghani Once Again Warns Against Proxy War

KARUL - President Ashraf Ghani has once again warned against proxy war in the country, saying no one should be allowed to turn Afghanistan into a center of proxy war.

Addressing a graduation ceremony of more than 300 military officers on Wednesday at the National Defense University in Kabul, Ghani stated that war was imposed on the Afghans. "I warn that no one should think this soil is for their proxy wars," Ghani reminded his audience. "If anyone thinks this is a good brothel, they will be destroyed by themselves." Ghani urged the forces to keep obtaining the faith of people and avoid civil instabilities and violation of people's rights. "This should only focus on these main duties," Ghani said, declaring that the army was not responsible to deal with the contracts. "Terrorism on the abduction of passengers from the highways, Ghani blamed it on instability of Afghanistan." "We are going to announce here that the hostages are being held just for a consultancy against the national unity," Ghani warned. "I ordered for a special operation and that 19 insurgents were killed," Ghani, however, confirmed repeated anti-terrorist missions. (More on P6.)

KARUL - At least six journalists and high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs have been removed from their posts, a government source revealed on Wednesday. An official, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed to 'Poljow Afgh' News the decision on the sackings was taken today by Foreign Minister Haneef Atmar and other officials.

Outlook Horoscope

You might appear somewhat subdued today as you settle into a steady pace and go about your business without much exuberance. Your current mood may reflect a recognition for your individual strengths now: you're more decisive just to get things done right. Your friends and relatives are no problem and you are in a happy mood today with a general sense of overall group success for a project.

Gemini (May 21-June 20)

Don't be on guard today. Your enemies didn't make you feel uncomfortable today. You think that you will be happy when you escape your own worst enemy and if you're not careful you will become more than your fair share of attention now. However, you are a much better informed person than today's spotlight on the day wears on. Unfortunately, your dramatic performance could make someone uneasy.

Cancer (June 21-July 20)

You may not like the way someone today, but you don't understand how the warm feelings you have for them can change. Thankful, a liver's quaff or a business conflict won't last long if you can maintain mutual respect, because you'll realize that the issue is not serious enough to merit further conflict.

Scorpio (Oct.24-Nov.21)

A heated debate with no solution can turn your nerves on edge. This is a tough day to focus your attention on. Although you might be tempted to settle the score away right, it's impossible because there's actually no reason to settle the score yet. You're probably a reasonable person to the difference of opinions of yourself.

Libra (Sept.23-Oct.22)

You might consider that your job is now a success with some more, but the idea of new projects at home spark your interest before you get tired. You may work with harder than you expect, if your plan is not as you wrote, you will be out with an altimetric improvement. You could go to a different place you could be frustrated with your scheme and try to leave it permanently.

Capricorn (Dec.22-Jan.19)

You may think more about someone today, but you understand how the warm feelings you have for them can change. Thankful, a liver's quaff or a business conflict won't last long if you can maintain mutual respect, because you'll realize that the issue is not serious enough to merit further conflict.

Aquarius (Jan.20-Feb.18)

Oddly, you are more certain about your feelings today. The conversation makes you think you're backing the wrong tree, but if you're not careful to get things done right. Your friends and relatives are no problem and you are in a happy mood today with a general sense of overall group success for a project.

Taurus (Apr.20-May 20)

Reforms in Public Offices: An Appreciable Stance

Afghanistan's political culture, produced and reproduced during more than 40 years of war and conflict, failed attempts to build a strong centralised and often tribal-based national state. Afghanistan has been, in the words of Harvard Professor Stephen P. Jones, "a society in which the political culture has been largely a matter of personal, family, and clan-based loyalties, rather than a strong state with a cohesive, centralised government."

The reforms initiated by the government have been aimed at transforming the political culture in the country, and they have been seen as a necessary step towards modernising the Afghan state and society. The reforms have involved a variety of measures, including the appointment of technocrats to government positions, the introduction of new laws and regulations, and the promotion of democratic values and principles.

30 Abducted Hazara Passengers

By Sher Ali Nader

"Abducted Hazara passengers have been released," that is the first thing I saw on my Facebook news feed as I walked down the street. Afghanistan has a long history of kidnappings, and I had heard that some 30 Hazara passengers who were abducted last month in the eastern province of Nangarhar had been released. The Hazara community in Afghanistan is the largest ethnic minority group, and their release is a significant development in the ongoing conflict in the country.

The Hazara community has a long history of suffering, with thousands of members of the community being killed or kidnapped by various groups over the years. The Hazara have long been a target of violence and persecution, and their release is a significant step towards ending this cycle.

The government has been praised for its efforts to secure the release of the passengers, and it has been commended for its commitment to ending the conflict in the country. The government has also been praised for its efforts to bring about a peaceful and prosperous Afghanistan. The release of the passengers is seen as a significant step towards achieving these goals.

Ukraine Peace Plan Clicks As Russia and Ukraine Row

KYIV - A peace plan is in the conflict in eastern Ukraine came under new strain on Wednesday, with Russia and Ukraine accusing each other of违背 assurances on reducing tensions.

Both sides have said there has been a return to violence since the de-escalation agreements announced last month. The Minsk Group, a European Union peace mission that has been trying to medi-ate the conflict, said the latest escalation was the result of a "further deterioration of the security situation in the region." It called on all sides to "exercise maximum restraint and avoid further steps that could lead to a new escalation." The announcement came as Russia and Ukraine accused each other of violations of the ceasefire agreement.

Russia has accused the Ukrainian military of violating the ceasefire, while Ukraine has denied any such violations. The Minsk Group said it was "concerned" by the recent events and called on all sides to "exercise maximum restraint and avoid further steps that could lead to a new escalation." The group said it would continue to monitor the situation and work towards a peaceful resolution.

WHO Urges Tough Tobacco Control to Improve Peoples' Health

AUGSBURG - The World Health Organization (WHO) has urged governments to take stronger measures to control the tobacco industry and reduce its health impacts.

"WHO is calling for a comprehensive, strong and consistent strategy to control tobacco, and for governments to adopt measures that will reduce its health impacts," said the WHO in a statement. "We must act now to save lives and reduce the burden of disease caused by tobacco use."
