No Election Unless System Reformed

KABUL - The Chief Executive Abdullah Abdullah has stated that as long as the electoral system has not been reformed, the government would not hold any election.

In an interview with the Voice of America, President Ashraf Ghani’s partner in the unity government noted that electoral reform was the only option to prevent fraud in the elections. Pointing to the delay of upcoming Parliamentary and pro-dignity council elections, Abdullah claimed that no election would be held until profound reforms are brought to the system.

Afghans on Pakistan: We will Swim, Not Sink, Together

WASHINGTON - As a result of Pakistan’s military operation in the tribal region of North Waziristan, more than 20,000 refugees have crossed the border into Afghanistan, President Ashraf Ghani said on Thursday.

"This year, Pakistan is going to have to stop sending, fighting, and that change the dynamic," the visiting Afghan leader told an audience at the Council on Foreign Relations in Washington on a visit to New York after his ar-ival from Washington.

"We are already 370,000 refugees flowing into Afghanistan as a result of the military operations. The great network of terrorism that was centered in North and South - from AQ to Quetta, to Uzbekistan and others - is being destroyed," Ghani said.

"On Pakistan, I cautiously optimist that we began a process of fundamental transformation. We defined the problem - that Pakistan has historically sheltered the enemy and... [More on Pa.4-5]

Will President’s Visit to U.S. Be a Deterrent in the Conflict?

By Hajrettin Cetin

President Ashraf Ghani has a visit to America arranged for March 23, which promises to be a heated media campaign and political event in Washington, D.C. In this event, the US government would establish a dialogue between the two leaders with a view to reducing the ongoing conflict in Afghanistan. The US government had invited Ghani to the US as a result of a call made by US President Joe Biden to the Afghan president after the US signed a peace agreement with the Taliban.

Afghanistan’s creation of a new government and the US-Taliban peace agreement have raised hope for a better future. The US government has been trying to convince the Taliban to continue the peace process and to help炔面 the Afghan government.

The US has invested a lot of time and resources on the Afghan war, which has lasted for over a decade. The US has spent over $900 billion in Afghanistan since the war began in 2001. The US has also trained and equipped the Afghan military and police forces.

The Afghan government has been in power since 2001 after the US-led invasion. The Afghan government has been plagued by corruption, political instability, and violence. The Taliban have been fighting against the Afghan government for over 40 years, and they control most of the rural areas in Afghanistan.

The US has been involved in the Afghan war since 2001, and it is unlikely that the US will ever leave the country. The US has been trying to negotiate a peace deal with the Taliban, but the Taliban have been demanding more than the US is willing to give.

The US government has been implementing a strategy of “partnership and transition,” which involves building up the Afghan security forces and training them to take over the fight against the Taliban. The US government has also been trying to build up the Afghan economy and create jobs for the Afghan people.

(1) No Election In East Timor

On Thursday, March 28, 2013, the elections in East Timor will not be held, the Australian government announced in a joint statement with the United Nations.

The elections were rescheduled for the second half of the year, following the failure of a fresh attempt to hold the elections last month.

The Australian government has been under pressure to postpone the elections due to concerns about security and the potential for violence.

The joint statement said that the Australian government and the United Nations had agreed to delay the elections.

The statement said that a new date for the elections would be announced in the coming months.

(2) Another Week

Decisions to hold elections in East Timor are subject to the United Nations and the East Timorese government.

The United Nations has set a deadline of March 31 for the elections to be held, or else the city of Dili will be declared a "no-go zone".

The United Nations has also threatened to impose military intervention if the elections are not held by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, the East Timorese government has said that it will hold elections as soon as possible.

Guinea's military, backed by the Russian military, has mounted an offensive against rebel groups in the region. The Russian military has been instrumental in supporting the government's efforts to regain control of the territory. This has raised concerns about the potential for an increase in regional tensions and the risk of a humanitarian crisis.

In order to address these concerns, the UN has called for a cessation of hostilities and the withdrawal of foreign military forces. Diplomatic efforts are ongoing to negotiate a peace agreement and establish a political framework that can ensure stable governance and security in the region.

However, the situation remains delicate, and the risk of conflict-induced displacement and loss of life continues to be high. Humanitarian agencies are working tirelessly to provide assistance to those affected by the conflict, and international interventions are essential to prevent a deterioration of the situation.

As such, it is crucial for all parties to prioritize dialogue, diplomacy, and reconciliation. The international community should continue to support peacebuilding efforts and provide necessary humanitarian aid, while also pushing for a sustainable resolution to the conflict through meaningful negotiations.

It is imperative to work towards a peaceful and inclusive future for Guinea and the wider West African region. Only through collective action and unyielding commitment can we aspire to build a better world, free from violence and suffering.
