Ghani’s Spokesman Rejects Secret Meetings with Taliban

KARUL - The Afghan government has had no secret meetings with the Taliban as President Ashraf Ghani’s spokesman says, rejecting such reports as "false and misleading.”

Stressing the need for improved relations with Pakistan, Presidential Aide Abdul Ahad told Tolo News that initially, Kabul needed to make peace with Islamabad.

He said there was an unwarranted hostility between the two neighbors, and emphasized on a clear definition of the relations between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

“So far, the Afghan government has not conducted any meeting with the Taliban. Once the peace process is started, the people will become aware about it. And all the rumors about secret meetings are untrue,” Ahad said.

While the people are hoping peace with the Taliban, the same has not been assumed by the Afghan government, which has been talking to the Taliban at various levels, Ahad said.

"The fundamental issue is that we can’t speak with Pakistan if there is no improvement in the relations. If there is improvement in the relations, then we can talk with them,” Ahad said.

Meanwhile, the second deputy chief of presidential staff Mohammad Mollaqil told Tolo News that he was not overly aware of the peace process. –Shabat on PUK

Abdullah Opposes Decision to Back Saudi Arabia

KARUL - Afghanistan has announced its support for Saudi Arabia for the 13-nation Saudi-led coalition against Yemeni Houthi.

The decision to launch strikes on the positions of anti-government militia capturing several cities of Yemen was taken in the light of the kingdom’s demand for Saudi Arabia. The kingdom-led coalition has so far successfully conducted a number of operations against the Yemeni Houthi.

6,500 Foreign Militants in Afghanistan: UN

Thousand foreign fighters in about 100 countries are fighting for Al-Qaeda and Daesh groups, according to an UN report.

KARUL - The UN experts have told the UN Security Council that 6,500 foreign militants fighting in Afghanistan have links to Al-Qaeda and Daesh groups.

According to the experts, more than 22,000 foreign fighters are engaged in fighting, comprising a "viable international financing and training network for extremists." Hundreds more foreign fighters are fighting in Libya, Yemen, Senegal and Pakistan, the report added.

The UN report came a day after a letter to the UN-left coalition launch air strikes a week ago against positions held by Shia rebels and their allies within the country.

The kingdom-led coalition has so far successfully conducted a number of operations against the Yemeni Houthi.

Iran's Nuclear Program

By Muhammad Rasool Shah.

Sat, 04 Apr 2015

The United States has been dealing with the issue of Iran's nuclear program for over a decade, and the negotiations between the two countries have been going on for several years now. The United States, along with its allies, is concerned about Iran's nuclear program because it could potentially be used for military purposes. However, Iran's government has always denied these claims and insists that its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes only.

In recent years, there have been several attempts to negotiate a deal that would allow Iran to continue its nuclear program while ensuring that the program is under international scrutiny. One of the most well-known attempts was the P5+1 negotiations, which took place from 2013 to 2015. These negotiations were eventually successful, and the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA) was signed in 2015.

Despite this agreement, there have been concerns raised about Iran's compliance with the terms of the agreement. In 2018, the United States unilaterally withdrew from the JCPOA and imposed new sanctions on Iran. This has led to a further deterioration of relations between the United States and Iran.

In recent months, there have been several attempts to revive the negotiations with Iran. In February 2023, the United States announced that it was prepared to return to the JCPOA negotiations. However, it remains to be seen whether these negotiations will be successful and if they will lead to a lasting solution to the issue of Iran's nuclear program.

Analysts Show Mounting Crisis of Ghani's Six-Month Governance

KARUL - Speaking to both the press and substance, political analysts and experts of crisis of President Ashraf Ghani's handling of policy making, particularly with the foreign relations, during his first half year in office. During this period, a number of successes in starting a new chapter in relations with regional countries, as well as critical alliances such as the United States and its NATO partners, critics say Ghani has failed to exercise the transparency and collaborative approach to policy making that he vowed he would implement. In the parliament, he pointed out that Ghani failed to list the Afghan ministry's effective reports to the National Assembly every six months and taken-membership relations in order for Afghanistan's relations with foreign nations. When he first took office, at his inauguration ceremony, Ghani made many hopeful promises that he has been admitted since. "My commitments to you [Afghans] is that the ministers will report on their work after every six months, and I will say goodbye to them if their reports are not come at the time. "one of the main goals of our ministers will be submitted to the National Assembly each six months, this will, they will be reporting about minor and major capacity projects. While there have been many pleasant developments in the foreign policy realms of national unity government's half-year rule, there, too, has been heavily criticized. In his inauguration, President Ghani discussed his first year's strategic approach to foreign policy and stressed that this would change the conditions in Afghanistan. Yet analysts have counted on this year's foreign policy, particularly...." (More on P.13)
