Abdullah Unsatisfied with NUG’s Performance

KABUL - Addressing a special gathering in Kabul under the banner of “human rights in Afghanistan” the Chief Executive Officer of the National Unity Government (NUG) Abdullah Abdullah on Wednesday said that he was not satisfied with the performance of the government over the past few months, adding that justice was also not being implemented in the judicial system.

“As part of the government, I am not at all satisfied with the government’s performance. It has been negligent,” Abdullah said.

In addition, Abdullah highlighted the difficulties currently facing the legal and judicial institutions in Afghanistan.

“Are we satisfied, when a person consults the judicial system and justice does not prevail? Of course not!” Abdullah added.

The NUG believes that without respect- ing human rights and maintaining justice in its true spirit, it will be impossible to move the country toward longstanding peace and stability. An issue which the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission (AIHRC) has always stressed.

“The National Unity Government must undertake inclusive and effective progress and initiatives to strengthen human rights, because the achievements gained are at risk,” AIHRC chairperson Fima Lumar said. Meanwhile, the UN special (More on Pg.17)

Access to Information Law Needs Aptomplementation and Realization

By Maimana

One of the basic values and principles governing public administration is transparency. Every system of government, especially democratic systems, requires that the public be informed about all developments taking place within the organs of the government. The foremost prerequisite for transparency is informed citizens who are well informed about the functionality of government in their daily lives. The role of the media includes informing the public about the government’s policies and programs and ensuring that they are implemented. The media therefore has a significant influence in a democratic state. This carries with it the responsibility to report accurately. The consequence of not doing so is that the public loses faith in the media. Access to information is crucial to accurate reporting and thus to accurately informing the public. Therefore, the government has a duty to ensure that the media can work in a free and independent manner. Democracy ensures the role of media by preserving its independence and objectivity. The government should endeavor to ensure that the media is independent, free and unmanipulated. Access to information is a basic human right. It is a right that the government has to respect and ensure. It is a right that the government has to respect and ensure. The right to access information can be exercised through various means, such as by seeking information from government agencies, by using the Freedom of Information Act, or by applying for access to government records. The right to access information is essential for the functioning of a democratic society. It ensures that the government is accountable to the public, which is a fundamental principle of democracy.

The Twin Sisters: Woman and Anjush

W hile a daughter suffers from a disease, a daughter to read with untreated suffering of her children, leaving the girls from one generation to another, the number, magnitude and economic cost of untreated maternal, child health and reproductive health problems is staggering. According to the World Health Organization, maternal mortality is a major global public health problem, with an estimated 810 maternal deaths occurring each day. Anjush is a 15-year-old girl who has been struggling with diabetes for the past two years. She has been diagnosed with type 1 diabetes, which means she needs to take insulin injections daily. Despite the help of a diabetes specialist and medical equipment, Anjush’s health condition is still not under control. Her parents have been repeatedly going to the government hospitals and clinics, but they are not able to get the appropriate treatment. Anjush’s case is not unique; there are many more children and adolescents who are suffering from diabetes, and their families are struggling to provide them with the necessary medical care and support. The lack of access to quality healthcare and the burden of diabetes on families and society is a significant concern.

A 24-year-old Afghan woman has been found guilty of an assault on her father. She had attacked him with a knife in the heart, killing him instantly. The woman was sentenced to death by hanging for the crime. This case highlights the ongoing violence against women in Afghanistan. The woman was convicted of killing her father with a knife in the chest, which led to his death. She was sentenced to death by hanging, which is the most severe form of punishment in Afghanistan. The case underscores the need for the government to take decisive action to address the issue of violence against women in the country. The government should ensure that justice is served and that perpetrators of violence are held accountable for their actions. This will help in creating a safer and more secure environment for women and girls in Afghanistan. The government should also work towards creating a more inclusive and protective legal framework to address the issue of violence against women.
