KABUL - Afghan National Air Force (ANAF) pilots are unhappy about their salaries and working conditions and have called on the government to address their issues.

Nusrat Rahmani, an Afghan pilot who won an international award for his bravery, said pilots and other air force personnel were fed up with the worst treatment and were determined to go on strike to express their grievances.

The pilots claim their salaries are only $20,000 a month, which does not justify the risk they take in the skies. They still have to pay to have their clothes cleaned and food is a daily expense.

They also have complained about the unap-plished food they get, where they feel they are still not paid for the food they consume. They have also complained about the unap-plished medicine they get, where they feel they are still not paid for the medicine they consume.

Peace Talks without Conditions?

National Unity Government (NUG), since its inception, has insisted on its right to sit at the peace talks with Taliban as a new entity. President Hadi Arslan of the Afghan government is trying to rebuild ties with Pakistan so as to be able to have government-to-government talks.

On April 3, a group of Afghan leaders held a meeting in the presence of Afghan government leaders and Pakistan's interior minister. The talks started with high hopes in Afghanistan as the government claims to have acknowledged its mistakes and has not been accused yet and there is a long way to go.

President Pakistan in a meeting with the members of Grand Iman Council on Friday, April 3, promised to help stabilize durable peace in the war-torn country. However, Pakistan and the Taliban are still at odds over the endgame process with the Taliban's claim that the peace process is not yet ready as the Taliban leaders are not present.

The Afghan government insists on the peace talks with Taliban. However, the negotiations between the two parties have been delayed due to lack of coordination between the Taliban and the Afghan government. The Taliban's demands include the release of all its prisoners held by the Afghan government, while the Afghan government insists on the release of all Taliban prisoners held by the Afghan government.

The Taliban's call for an unconditional and inclusive peace process is a hopeful sign, but the Afghan government must also take into account the Taliban's demands. The Taliban's statement on the release of all prisoners is a positive development, as it shows that the Taliban are willing to engage in a dialogue and find a solution to the conflict.

The Afghan government must also show its commitment to peace by releasing the Taliban prisoners as promised. The release of prisoners is a crucial step in the process of achieving peace in Afghanistan. The release of prisoners will not only help to reduce tensions between the two parties but will also pave the way for other aspects of the peace process.

The Afghan government must also work towards creating an environment that is conducive to peace talks. This includes addressing the security concerns of both parties and ensuring that the peace talks are free from external interference.

In conclusion, the Afghan government must give serious consideration to the Taliban's call for an unconditional and inclusive peace process. The release of prisoners is a crucial step in the process of achieving peace in Afghanistan. The Afghan government must also work towards creating an environment that is conducive to peace talks. This includes addressing the security concerns of both parties and ensuring that the peace talks are free from external interference.

What the Taliban Say by Releasing Mullah Omar's Biography

By Abdul Ahad Bahmani

The Taliban's release of a biography of Mullah Omar, the leader of the Taliban movement in Afghanistan, is a significant development in the ongoing peace process. The Taliban's release of the biography is seen as a move towards dialogue and reconciliation.

The Taliban's release of the biography is a step towards addressing the concerns of the Afghan government and the international community. The release of the biography is seen as a signal that the Taliban are willing to engage in a dialogue and find a solution to the conflict.
