JALALABAD — In the wake of Saturday’s mortar attack in Jalalabad city, thousands of city dwellers have locked up their bikes, fearing for the lives of at least 54 people. The 54 victims, including 25 men, 15 women, 8 children, and 6 women, were reportedly killed in the explosion that rocked the heart of Jalalabad on Saturday night.

Dr. Ausma Masoud, 35, who lives near the site of the blast, said the city has become a ghost town since the attack. “It’s been silent for the past few days. People are scared to stay out after dark,” she said.

Doctors in Ghor Threaten En Masse Resignation

MIRWAH — Doctors in the provincial hospital in Ghor on Sunday threatened to resign if the government failed to resolve their legitimate wage and holiday issues.

The doctors are the only one coming from the hometown of the city of Ghor and Dara Khoo.

In a statement, the chairman of the doctors, Dr. Naziruddin Ghori, said, “We have been looking for a job in Ghor and Dara Khoo for a long time. We have tried to get a job in other places, but we have not succeeded.”

The doctors threatened to resign if their demands were not met. The hospital lacks three doctors and already has only one doctor on staff. The major hospital, now without its staff, is in a critical situation.

Jalalabad Presents a Gloomy Picture after Bombing

JALALABAD — At least six-sided bombing and explosions in the central city, the provincial capital, according to preliminary reports, have left many dead and injured among the victims.

At least 13 people, including 17 persons injured, were killed in a series of blasts that rocked the city on Sunday.

A car bomb explosion occurred at 10:30 a.m. near a government building in the city center. The explosion killed at least three people and injured 17 others. A second explosion occurred at 1:30 p.m. near the main bazaar area, which killed two people and injured six others.

Eyewitnesses said the explosions were heard throughout the city, causing panic and confusion among the residents.

The bomb explosions were followed by a gunfight, which lasted for more than an hour. Some witnesses said they saw a group of people running away from the area after the explosions.

A spokesman for the interior ministry said the attack was likely an act of terrorism. The government has called on the people to remain vigilant and avoid any place that could be a potential target.

Jalalabad is a city with a population of about 300,000 people. The city has been hit by several terrorist attacks in recent years. The city is located in the heart of Afghanistan, which has been hit by a series of terrorist attacks over the past decade.

New AM Radio Goes on Air

SHAH LOW, AFGHANISTAN — A 200,000-watt AM radio station launched transmissions on Sunday, becoming the first community-based radio station in southern Afghanistan.

The radio’s “fellowship” board in southern Afghanistan, which was established by the Afghan National Radio Corporation (ANRC), said the station would be broadcast in neighboring Kandahar, Ghazni, and Zabul and across the Iranian border on 97.6 kHz medium waves.

Ibn Naqim Faisal, the radio’s director and owner, said they had received permission from the government to broadcast. He said Jalalabad was an independent city and was not under the control of any local, national, or international political organization.

The radio is established with support from the Emergence Media Training Center, the United Nations, and the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The radio, which is established under the banner of an underground, said it was a channel for the youth of the regions and has already started broadcasting trials.

The Final Push to End Extreme Poverty

By Jin Yong Kim

2023 is the most important year for global development in many decades, as the world is on the cusp of eradicating extreme poverty. The United Nations has set the target of ending extreme poverty by 2030, and recent data shows that significant progress has been made, with a sharp decline in the number of people living in extreme poverty. However, the goal is not yet within reach, and significant challenges remain.

The report highlights three key factors driving progress: the rapid increase in global wealth, the expansion of social protection programs, and the growing importance of technology in addressing poverty. The report also notes that aid from developed countries has been crucial in helping to reduce poverty, and that partnerships between governments, civil society, and the private sector are essential for achieving the goal.

The report identifies several areas where more action is needed, including improving access to education and healthcare, providing better opportunities for women and girls, and addressing the root causes of poverty such as conflict and climate change. The report concludes by calling for continued global collaboration and investment to achieve the goal of ending extreme poverty by 2030.

The report also highlights the importance of data and monitoring, noting that effective monitoring and evaluation are crucial for ensuring that progress is being made and that resources are being used efficiently.

The report urges governments and organizations to work together to address the remaining challenges and to ensure that the world is on track to achieve the goal of ending extreme poverty by 2030.

Israel Views Russia’s S-300 Sale to Iran with ‘Ultrasmall Gravity’: PM

JERUSALEM — Israel views with utmost gravity the supply of the S-300 surface-to-air missile system to Iran,(HWND said at a press conference on Sunday.The Israeli prime minister, Binyamin Netanyahu, said that the supply of the system to Iran raises the possibility of a regional arms race and poses a threat to Israel’s security. He warned that the deployment of the S-300 missile system in Iran could lead to an increase in missile attacks on Israeli targets.

“This is a defensive arms race in the region,” Netanyahu said. “We are in a race to deter attacks on Israeli interests.”

The Israeli prime minister also called on the international community to take strong and immediate action to prevent the transfer of advanced military technology to Iran.

“The S-300 system is a game-changer in the region,” Netanyahu said. “It gives Iran a significant advantage in its quest for nuclear weapons and advanced missile technology.”

Russian Minister Visits Arctic Island ‘Regrettably’: Norway

HELSINKI — Norway has demanded that Moscow withdraw financial assistance to a polar research station on the remote Arctic island of Svalbard, which is occupied by Russia.

Russian Finance Minister Vladislav Surkov met with Norwegian Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg on Saturday to discuss the closure of the polar research station on the island.

“We are concerned about the consequences of this decision,” Stoltenberg said. “We believe that the Russian move is a threat to international cooperation and security in the Arctic.”

The closure of the polar research station on Svalbard would have serious implications for Arctic research and cooperation among countries with an interest in the region.

Uzbekistan to Launch New Home Appliances

TASHKENT — Uzbekistan has started production of new home appliances, including refrigerators, washing machines, and air conditioners.
