Daesh Threatens Security of Whole Region: Ghani

KARUL - Addressing a group of Indian and Afghan journalists in New Delhi on Wednesday, Afghan President Ashraf Ghani said that he has held inclusive discussions with Indian officials on security matters. Referring to emerging threats relating to Daesh, Ghani said that the group poses a serious threat to regional security, warning that Daesh was worse than al-Qaeda. Highlighting impacts of the military operation conducted by Pakistani military forces in Waziristan, Ghani said that the operation had displaced hundreds of militiamen which win impacted the security situation in Afghanistan. Ghani stressed the fact that stabilisation in Afghanistan will destabilise the whole region — adding that Daesh was in fact a major threat to world peace and stability.

He said, "With all apologies to Mikeo, it seems the US is changing its strategy and viewpoint and its policies. This is a far worse thing than the Daesh.

"Why is this happening? Because state collapse enables these movements to seek space..." (More on P6.)

Japanese PM to Make Historic Address to Congress, Talk Trade

WASHINGTON — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe will seek support for a Trans-Pacific trade pact that he has divided US lawmakers as he makes the first visit to Japan by a leader of the Japan in a joint meeting of Congress. Abe will be promoting his package of support for allies and friends, an approach that underlies Washington’s war in Afghanistan as it is challenging the US as the key power in the region, and can expect a warm welcome on its first official visit to the US.

Abe’s five-day visit on Monday will mark the first trip to the US by a Japanese prime minister in nine years. It comes as Abe is trying to boost Japan’s economy and as US President Barack Obama is preparing to address a joint session of Congress on Tuesday.

Abe will be meeting with US lawmakers and Obama, who is preparing to visit Japan in November, will likely discuss a range of issues, including US-Japan trade, security and economic cooperation.

Abe’s visit is expected to be productive, with both sides seeking to strengthen ties and build on the momentum of the Obama-Abe summit in April.

Balance of Trade Sees Imports Jump, Exports Drop

KARUL – Afghanistan trade deficit jumped to 99 percent in the year 2015-16, with the total value of trade reaching $8.67 billion USD, of which $7.87 billion USD were imports and only $801 million USD were exports.

As a country that has strived to become industry and improve exports over the years, a trade deficit of $7.26 billion USD is a major concern. Afghanistan continues to import far more than it exports, sending more currency abroad than the country is bringing in.

According to officials at the Central Statistics Office (CSO), last year was one of the worst economically for Afghanistan on record.

"Afghanistan is a country dependent on imports, and this shows a lack of government management," CSO Economic Director Azizullah Faqiri said on Wednesday. "The government must lay out economic plans and increase exports by using the available resources. Increase in expatriates will not only increase employment."
