President Ashraf Ghani

Law be Implemented in Letter and Spirit

Emphasized that short and medium-term plans should be worked out and implemented.

The reforms in the Ministry of Justice were one of the main points in the 2020 plan and comprehensive plan should be pursued.

The president highlighted that a comprehensive plan should be revised for least educated and unprivileged people so that they could be included in the nation building process.

The minister of justice presented his work plan in four different sections including formation of law.

The release of hostages will be brought to Kabul as soon as weather permits. No prisoner was paid for their release," Ghani said.

In addition, Ghani put rumors of a prisoner swap to rest and said that his government does not believe in the policy of a prisoner swap.

"No prisoner swap was carried out. Government does not have and will not have a policy to exchange prisoners for hostages," he said.

Ghani pledged that he would not negotiate the release of terrorists on the principles of the Taliban.

1. A Better Analysis of China’s Foreign Aid

China is the world’s largest developing country. In its development, China has always been a propitious factor of global economic growth. Through China’s development, the developing countries within the framework of South-South cooperation to help and support other developing countries to increase their productivity and improve livelihoods.

The basic principles of China’s aid in providing foreign assistance are respect for the principle of equality, respect for the principle of non-interference, self-help, mutual assistance and assistance, and the principle of self-sufficiency. In recent years, China’s foreign assistance has kept growing. Asia and Africa are the major recipient regions of China’s foreign assistance.

To promote the realization of Millennium Development Goals, China decided to ramp up its assistance to eliminate hunger and poverty. (1)

II. Financial Resources and Forms of China’s Foreign Assistance From 2002 to 2012, China’s foreign assistance mainly included bilateral assistance, China’s assistance to non-governmental organizations, and China’s assistance to the United Nations. China’s foreign assistance has helpedkker several recipient countries build small or medium-sized social welfare projects, and to lead human resources development cooperation, technical cooperation, national assistance and emergency humanitarian aid, and reducing or eliminating the global food security crisis.

III. China’s Aid to Afghanistan

China has been attentive to the peace and development of Afghanistan, but China’s aid is modest and without any political conditions. In the 1990s and 2000s, although China was not at war with the Taliban, it did join the United Nations’ peacekeeping mission in Afghanistan. In 2002, China opened a mission in Kabul and in 2005, China signed a five-year cooperation agreement with Afghanistan. It is mutually agreed that the two countries will not only in terms of capital but also in terms of non-capital areas.

Along with Saudi King, Putin Must Rule Seattle to Skip US Summit

Kerry to Hold Talks with Russian President Putin

The State Department announced that John Kerry, the U.S. Secretary of State, will travel to Russia this week for talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin. Kerry’s visit to Russia, following the Ukraine conflict, began with a meeting with Putin on Saturday. The meeting was reportedly delayed due to scheduling conflicts, but Kerry and Putin eventually met and discussed various issues, including Syria and nuclear non-proliferation.

Russian-Ukrainian tensions have escalated since the ousting of Ukraine’s pro-Russian president, Yanukovych, in February. The situation has been further complicated by the ongoing conflict in Eastern Ukraine, where pro-Russian separatists have been fighting against the government.

The two leaders are expected to discuss a range of issues, including the situation in Ukraine, the crisis in Syria, and potentially the upcoming G8 summit in Italy. Kerry is expected to make a strong case for a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Ukraine, urging Putin to工作 on restoring peace and stability.

It is unclear what specific agreements were reached during the meeting. However, both leaders have expressed a desire to reduce tensions and resume dialogue. The hope is that the meeting will pave the way for further discussions on how to resolve the conflict.

The meeting comes at a crucial time as the United States prepares to host the upcoming G8 summit in Italy. The summit will bring together leaders from eight of the world’s most industrialized countries to discuss global issues, including the situation in Ukraine and the crisis in Syria.

The meeting between Kerry and Putin is expected to be significant in shaping the direction of future interactions between the United States and Russia. Both leaders are likely to emphasize the need for a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Ukraine, as well as the importance of maintaining open lines of communication.

It is worth noting that the meeting comes amid a broader context of uncertainty and tension in global affairs. The situation in Ukraine has been marked by violence and disagreement, with both sides accusing each other of violating international law.

Overall, the meeting between Kerry and Putin is seen as a crucial step towards resolving the conflict in Ukraine and improving relations between the United States and Russia. The outcome of the meeting will be closely watched by both countries, as well as by other key players in the international community.

BENGHAZI - Libya's Tripoli, the United States has announced a new round of Sanctions against Libya, targeting its oil sector. The sanctions were announced by the State Department on Thursday, following the recent election of a new government in Libya.

The new round of sanctions includes measures targeting Libya’s oil sector, including the freezing of assets and the prohibition of oil exports. The sanctions are designed to prevent Libya from gaining revenue from its oil sector and to undermine the new government's efforts to stabilize the country.

The sanctions follow the recent election of a new government in Libya, which has been struggling to gain control over the country. The new government has been criticized for its inability to secure the country and for its failure to address the country's economic problems.

The sanctions are expected to have a significant impact on Libya's oil sector, which is the country's main source of revenue. The sanctions are likely to further weaken Libya's economy and to make it more difficult for the government to address its challenges.

The sanctions come amid a broader context of uncertainty and tension in global affairs. The situation in Libya has been marked by violence and disagreement, with both sides accusing each other of violating international law.

Overall, the sanctions are seen as a necessary step towards stabilizing the country and preventing Libya from gaining revenue from its oil sector. The outcome of the sanctions will be closely watched by both countries, as well as by other key players in the international community.

MPs Discuss Rise in Afghan Timber Smuggling

KABUL - Lawmakers in Parliament on Monday voiced their concerns about illegal logging in Afghanistan. According to MPs, despite a presidential decree banning the practice, many continue to smuggle Afghan timber into Pakistan for profit.

"The security, investigation and intelligence institutions need to decide on how to prevent it," Kapisa MP Nabil Sofi said during Monday's plenary session. "The smuggling must be expanded to people and should be introduced to the court of law so they won't struggle in the future," he added.

Although the Ministry of Finance (MoF) avoided confirming the timber smuggling or discussing any particular action in the ministry, spokespeople encouraged better cooperation among government offices in order to address any form of smuggling.

We have strict measures to prevent smuggling..." (More on P4,16)
