Rovining Af-Pak Relation on Avenues of Resolute Ties

By Assayatari

Both Afghanistan and Pakistan have been cooperative neighbors for a long time. However, the situation has changed recently due to the Afghan government's decision to close the crossing gate at Torkham in response to the Taliban's killing of civilians and Afghan border agents. This decision was aimed at protecting the Afghan nation's sovereignty and security. Although both Afghan and Pakistani leaders have expressed their concern, the Afghan government's action is a clear indication of their determination to ensure the safety and well-being of their citizens. The Afghan government has made it clear that it will not tolerate any violation of its sovereignty and territorial integrity. As a result, Pakistan has decided to respond in a similar manner to ensure its own national security. This situation has put pressure on the Afghan government to revisit its decision and find a peaceful solution to the issue. The Afghan government has expressed its willingness to engage in dialogue to resolve the issue and maintain good relations with Pakistan. This is a positive step towards resolving the situation and ensuring peace and stability in the region. The international community, including the United States and China, has urged both countries to exercise restraint and find a peaceful solution to the issue. The Afghan government has also assured the international community of its commitment to maintaining good relations with Pakistan and ensuring peace and stability in the region.
The Indian government's decision to continue its presence in Afghanistan and Pakistan was met with mixed reactions.

Political Developments

- India's Decision
  - The Indian government decided to continue its presence in Afghanistan and Pakistan, even after the Taliban seized power.
  - This decision was met with mixed reactions from both countries.

- Taliban's Perspective
  - The Taliban welcomed India's decision, seeing it as a sign of support and cooperation.

- Indian Observations
  - The Indian government noted that the Taliban's stance towards India had evolved and that there was a need for a dialogue to address the issue.
  - Discussions were held between India and the Taliban, focusing on the implementation of a peace deal and the role of regional actors.

International Relations

- Regional Dynamics
  - The regional dynamics in the region have been constantly shifting, influenced by various factors such as historical ties, economic interests, and geopolitical considerations.
  - The Indian government's decision was seen as part of a broader strategy to strengthen ties with other regional countries.

- Future Prospects
  - There is an expectation that the renewed dialogue between India and the Taliban could lead to a stabilization of the situation in the region.
  - However, the outcome remains uncertain, and there are significant challenges to overcome, including security, governance, and economic development.

US Says ‘Critical’ for Putin to Live Up to Ukraine Truce

ANTALYA, Turkey — Senior US officials on Wednesday warned Russia that a new, critical step to implement a fragile truce was needed to end the fighting in Ukraine, while the US State Department and a lawmaker pointed to Russian actions as raising serious questions about Moscow’s will to comply with the terms of a ceasefire agreement being held on Tuesday in Minsk.

Washington officials said they were cautiously optimistic about the prospects for a lasting peace in the east of the country where Russia-backed rebels have been fighting government forces for years.

"I think there was strong agreement on the need for the idea to be real and to be active by Russia, by the separatist groups, and by the third party," said Assistant Secretary for European and Eurasian Affairs Philip Reeker at a State Department news conference.

The agreement also calls for "critical outcomes" in terms of both a ceasefire that would end the fighting and the release of prisoners.

But while some US officials expressed confidence that Russia would comply, others warned that Moscow’s impact on the situation was limited.

"The problem is that Russia is not an independent actor in this situation," said Reeker. "They are a player in the conflict and they have significant influence over the separatists who are fighting in eastern Ukraine."

"We are concerned about their continued influence," he added. "But we also understand that they have a significant role to play in ending the conflict."
World Has Failed to Defeat Terrorist: Turkish FM

Antalya, Turkey—Turkey’s Foreign Minister Abdullah Gül told reporters here on Tuesday said the international community has failed in defeating terrorism and defining terrorism. He was addressing a press conference in this southern city of Antalya before foreign ministers from NATO member states start meetings on Wednesday and Thursday.

The foreign ministers will likely discuss issues ranging from Ukraine to the Middle East, including Syria and Iraq and the turmoil in Libya. The Turkish foreign minister said:

Women Rights Be Protected in Peace Talks: EPD

KARUL - Equality for Peace and Democracy (EPD), a pro-Kurdish political party, said on Thursday that all agreements should not compromise on women’s rights to education and politics during talks of peace.

The EPD complained the peace process was being used by the political select individual who wanted to serve their own interests. They warned against ignoring and giving up the management of Afghan women’s positions.
