Lack of Political Will behind Electoral Reform Impasse

KABUL - With still no progress on electoral reforms, and no date yet set for parliamentary elections, Chief Executive Abdullah Abdullah's First Deputy, Mohammad Khan, spoke on Friday to clarify what he sees as a lack of political will among the country's leaders. Implementation of fundamental reforms in Afghanistan's electoral system was one of the central tenets of the national unity government agreement, which brought President Ashraf Ghani and Chief Executive Abdullah Abdullah under the same roof. However, with eight months passed, the leaders have reached an impasse over the formation of a committee to oversee the election agenda, highlighting the lack of common ground and political will among the leaders.

Equity Essential for Justice

By Abdul Ahad Bahrami

Afghan President Ashraf Ghani has ordered amendment of some controversial articles of the Constitution, accepting Afghanistan’s National Directorate for Security (NDS) and Pakistan’s intelligence agency, the Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI), assertion that the intelligence-sharing between Afghanistan and Pakistan spy agencies hasspread considerably among Afghanistan and Pakistan’s intelligence agencies in a bid to align that a draft agreement is signed by two sides. In an attempt to encounter the critics, President Ashraf Ghani has come under increasing pressure as the security forces said that the agreement between the two countries. However, it is rather a time for the two governments to work on revising historic differences between the two countries and build mutual respect and interest. It should be noted that there can never be relations free of problems, and that a perfect agreement by itself will not be able to make relations free of problems, especially when it comes to issues of trust.

US Rejects Nuclear Disarmament Document over Israeli Concerns

UNITED NATIONS - The United States on Friday vetoed a global disarmament document aimed at halting the world's nuclear arms, saying any attempt to reduce strategic arsenals was "dangerous" and encouraged "irresponsible" nuclear states.

The 60-page, never-before-seen document was the result of a year of negotiations by representatives from more than 150 countries, under the auspices of the United Nations Security Council.

"The United States will support any genuine effort to achieve a safer world through non-proliferation," a senior US official said. "But we will not sign a document that will encourage the proliferation of the world's most dangerous weapons," another diplomat said.

The US blocking of the non-proliferation treaty and a reinvigorated UN Security Council's commitment to non-proliferation for the first time in four years has been blockaded after four weeks of negotiations. The treaty revision conference in 2005 was held in New York.

The document was endorsed by 115 states, backed by Britain and Canada, making the American refusal a moment in international diplomacy that could undermine the entire blueprint for non-proliferation for the first time in four years.

"We support efforts to achieve a safer world through non-proliferation," Britain's Foreign Office said. "But we will not sign a document that will encourage the proliferation of the world's most dangerous weapons."

"China will continue to implement the disarmament commitment and area and take all necessary measures to prevent non-proliferation measures from being hampered either in the short term or in the long term," a Beijing spokesman called the minister to "define the situation and make decisions on the incident".

"We will launch a verification process in the next few days."
