The Demands of Better Living

By Dilawar Sherezi

lthough January is often considered the month of revolution, the demands of better living are not limited to this time of year. In fact, they are constant and require constant attention.

Every day, we face challenges that affect our ability to live better. Whether it is the high cost of living, inadequate healthcare, or environmental issues, these demands are felt by all segments of society.

In Afghanistan, the demand for better living is heightened by the ongoing conflict and its impact on everyday life. The lack of basic services, such as clean water and electricity, further exacerbates the situation.

The demands of better living are not just about personal comfort; they are also about creating a society that is just and equitable. This is why it is important for us to collectively work towards a better future.

In conclusion, the demand for better living is a constant call for action. Let us not lose sight of this goal, even in the face of adversity.

Talents Not Supported from Afghan Education System

By Bismillah Alizada and Mahmood Mohammad

The Afghan education system is in dire need of support and improvement. Despite having a rich cultural and historical heritage, the education system has failed to produce leaders and thinkers who can bring about positive change.

The lack of investment in education has resulted in a significant brain drain, with many young people seeking opportunities abroad. This is a worrying trend that needs to be addressed.

The government and international organizations need to work together to improve the quality of education in Afghanistan. This includes providing scholarships, training teachers, and investing in infrastructure.

In conclusion, the Afghan education system requires urgent attention and support. Let us work together to ensure a bright future for our children.
