Ramadan and Societal Responsibilities

The holy month of Ramadan has started and the Muslims around the world are observing fast. Fasting is an integral part of Islam and it is a duty on every Muslim to fast during the month of Ramadan.

Fasting, in real sense, is not just keeping oneself away from food and water for the entire day. It is an opportunity for introspection to bring about positive changes in their social life. One of the most important need of the society today is tolerance and it is not advisable for a person in his individual life but also for his social behavior. It is a habit of a person in managing better social interactions and at the same time improving social relations. Tolerance is one of the highest qualities one has to achieve if he helps build the society, which largely depends on his character and personality. Tolerance is the basic ingredient of religion which is considered as the most important ingredient around the world. Non-tolerant behavior has always emphasized on the necessity of tolerance.

Tolerance for others is necessary in today’s multicultural world. Muslims are all around the world and there are many Muslim countries that have diverse religious groups living in them. Muslims need to show great tolerance and respect for them and fast in a manner that does not harm the local culture and life style and make them observe the day and at the same time keeping oneself pleasant and placid requires a great deal of tolerance. Moreover, it is one of the requirements of fasting that a person must not get too hungry in his social dealings and must fast to keep his temper angry and abusive exactly are the factors that spoil a person’s fast and are not at all allowed.

Another important aspect of the month of Ramadan is the household. The husband and wife, parents and children have to get involved in the household work and look after each other and try to get involved in helping each other and try to look after each other even when they are outside the household.

Another important point that can be learned from fasting is the self-control, which can play an important role in changing the society and bringing about positive changes. The people who are able to control themselves are able to control the society, while fasting is one of the ways of practicing the self-control. During the month of Ramadan, people have to control their excesses and they have to observe the time when they eat and drink and the way they behave and afterward be used in changing the society for better.

Realizing the importance of the holy month, the government is trying to maintain itself from the last day that a person can take in the way to virtue and other activities, allowing the locals to participate in the social and cultural activities, the government is keeping all the activities in the state and in fact become a part of them and strengthen them.

As a way of trying to earn extra profit from the business dealings, it can be cited in this regard. Businessmen and shopkeepers, for instance, are not able to try to make the attempt of earning more money in any possible way. They increase the price of the items they sell without taking consideration of the regulations of the selling price of the negative impact of this increase may have on the lives of other people, especially those who suffer from poverty.

In conclusion, during the month of Ramadan, instead of feeling that the class disparity is negative and evil, it is further strengthened. This is also true in the case of the Muslim society, rich have different types of dishes on their tables while breaking their fast. Even the Muslims and Quranic teachings are emphasizing the need of reaching the poor and hungry to share each other’s food.

Peace Talks Should Be Held on Government’s Term

The newly installed government in Kabul affirms security as the top most priority for the country. However, as far as the Taliban are concerned, they have already gained multiple leaders, the way to this triumph might not be easy. The current situation in the country is rather tense. After two years of civil war, government has changed. It is a difficult to arrange peace talks between the government and the Taliban to solve the current issues. This could result into deeper problems in the country. If the talk fails, the Taliban will try to prove that they are the leader and take over the country.

Previosly it was reported by credible media that Afghan government and the Taliban have been invited to direct peace talks. The report added that efforts were being made to arrange the talk in Kabul to prove the Taliban’s claim of being the leader of the country. However, the new government in Kabul is the first to become the talk between the Taliban and the Afghan government.

It is a difficult task to talk to the Taliban without being certain of the government. The government and its security forces are facing problems in the country. It seems that the government is not able to control the situation.

The Australian government in Kabul is the one who is trying to negotiate a peace deal with the Taliban. It is a difficult situation for the government to talk to the Taliban without the assurance of the Taliban’s commitment to peace.
