President Ashraf Ghani

No one Should Gamble Afghanistan will Collapse

KARUL - President Ashraf Ghani on Tuesday said the war had been imposed on the Afghans and Afghans should not fall into a trap. "No one should gamble that God forbid Afghanistan will collapse," Ghani said. He pointed out, however, that the war had lasted for 30 years, and that Afghans had not prevented it from ending. "We are giving our lives and there is a need that the region and all of our neighbors with one voice must use a consensus," he said.||The government should learn one fundamental lesson: instability in a country in one region causes instability in the entire region and the world," he said. The president said Afghan women had not suffered the most in the ongoing war in the country. He said the Afghan women were the most affected in the country. "I urge you that whenever we reach a peace agreement, Afghanistan women's presence in the government will be made sure," the president pleaded. Also on Tuesday, the president named the first female Supreme Court justice in Afghanistan's history.||---

Forgetting Afghanistan Would be Disastrous

KARUL - The UN Security Council's Special Representative and head of the UN Assistance Mission in Afghanistan Nicholas Haysom said Tuesday that the international community must not take "eye off theball" when it comes to Afghanistan's stability, as it would be "disastrous" if the country was forgotten about amid pressing global issues. Haysom, who was speaking to the UN News Center, warned that the country was facing numerous challenges that will take time to solve. He said that although the country has made progress in meeting the country's challenges in the economic, security and political fields, Afghanistan continues to be affected by the conflict from within.||---

The Challenges of Multiculturalism

By Dilawar Shergzi

The world of men is embalmed with variety of thoughts, feelings, perceptions and ideologies. And the same variety, many of them, are held and supported by diverse groups. In such a society, the challenge for the current phase of human evolution is to create harmony among these groups. There is no reason to stand solidly firm against evil human beings; for, if we do, we shall become a group of nonentities. No reason can stand solidly firm against evil human beings; for, if we do, we shall become a group of nonentities. Obama Signs Trade Bills into Law, Giving Boost to TPP Talks

WASHINGTON - U.S. President Barack Obama on Thursday signed several trade bills into law, prompting an immediate opposition response that the president had failed to deliver on his promise to win changes to the rules governing trade negotiations.

The law that is based on the Trans-Pacific Partnership, which the administration has been negotiating for years, is intended to give the president the authority to enter into free trade agreements without the traditional safeguards that require congressional approval. The law also gives the president the authority to unilaterally increase the number of products imported into the country.

Obama is set to travel to Australia in September to sign into law the Trans-Pacific Partnership, which is seen as a landmark achievement in the global trade talks.

The president's signature on the bill comes as he faces growing criticism from both sides of the political spectrum for his handling of the Trans-Pacific Partnership, which has been under negotiation for years.

The bill, known as the Trade Promotion Authority (TPA), is designed to give the president the authority to enter into free trade agreements without the traditional safeguards that require congressional approval. The bill also gives the president the authority to unilaterally increase the number of products imported into the country.

The law is a major victory for the president, who has been trying to negotiate a trade agreement that would expand U.S. access to foreign markets and boost American exports.

However, the bill also faces opposition from a number of lawmakers who say it is too one-sided in favor of businesses and could hurt American workers and consumers.

The bill is expected to pass both chambers of Congress and is likely to be signed into law by the end of the year.

In a statement, President Obama said the bill is a "historic step forward" that will "open new markets for American workers and businesses."
KARUL - The United Nations International Day of Peace was marked in the country on Tuesday. The theme of the day was "Building Trust and Promoting Mutual Understanding Among Nations to Build a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Development of Society". The day was observed with various activities, including a march and a rally held in the central part of the city.

The rally began at the main square and continued to the city’s main streets, where speeches were made and a moment of silence was observed. The participants emphasized the importance of peace and called for greater understanding and cooperation among nations.

KARUL - The UNODC has called for national mobilization against narcotics. The call comes as the country continues to face a significant narcotics problem. The UNODC has been working with the government to develop strategies to combat narcotics trafficking and abuse.

Glhani Urged to Denounce Remarks of Army Chief

WASHINGTO, - US-based Human Rights Watch on Tuesday urged President Ashraf Ghani to denounce remarks by the chief of the army offering soldiers protection from punishment for war crimes. Ghani, who is commander-in-chief of the Afghan armed forces, should reaffirm the country's security forces to respect the laws of war and put commanders on notice that failing to do so will result in disciplinary action.

The intervention has been made on the same day that a parliamentary election was held in Afghanistan. The election was marked by widespread irregularities and allegations of fraud.

"It is essential that Afghan President Ghani reaffirm the laws of war to his security forces and put commanders on notice that violating these laws will result in disciplinary action," said Philip Cherlin, deputy director at HRW.

"President Ghani should state clearly that Afghan security forces have a legal requirement to respect the laws of war, and that failure to do so will result in disciplinary action," said Cherlin, who is deputy director at HRW.
