US Praises ANSF Quick Response to Terror Acts

WASHINGTON - The Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) have come a long way in de-radicalizing and securing their country, the United States said last Saturday. The ANSF has made significant strides in successfully and quickly responding to the terrorist suicide attack in Kabul.

"Looking at the response of the Afghan national security forces, the speed with which they got on scene and the efficiency with which they dealt with the attackers, I think, shows that the training and assistance that we’ve given them has been effective," the State Department spokesperson, John Kirby, told reporters at his daily news conference. Responding to questions on the latest terrorist attack in Kabul, Kirby said during this summertime it is not unusual or unexpected to see more Taliban attacks, not just in Kabul but elsewhere in Afghanistan during the summer.

So this is not altogether surprising. I don’t have trend analysis... (More on PI-06)

Amnesty International alleges that member of the Taliban was killed in an airstrike.

An air strike has killed a Taliban fighter in Afghanistan, according to reports.

The strike was reported to have been carried out by a US drone, targeting a Taliban position in the eastern province of Nangarhar.

Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid denied the attack, saying it was not part of their military strategy.

US officials have confirmed that a member of the Taliban was killed in the strike, but they have not provided any further details.

The US government has been carrying out a number of airstrikes in Afghanistan in recent weeks, targeting Taliban positions in the eastern and southern provinces.

The Taliban have not commented on the strike, and it is unclear whether any civilians were affected.

The situation in Afghanistan remains tense, with fighting continuing between the Taliban and Afghan security forces.

Amnesty International has repeatedly called for an end to the violence in Afghanistan, and for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The group has urged all parties to engage in dialogue and work towards a lasting peace.

The US government has also been trying to negotiate a peace deal with the Taliban, but progress has been slow.

The situation in Afghanistan remains fragile, and there is a real risk of further escalate the violence.
