Escalated Terrorism and Peace

Terrorism and Peace

By Hujiatullah Zia

D enunciations of Afghan Local Police (ALP) were killed in cold blood on Thursday July 4 when four armed men stormed a police post in Jalalabad City, the capital of Nangarhar Province. The incident galvanized the public and sparked sensational protests against the Afghan government and its Western allies. The police post is situated in a sensitive area and is a target for terrorist attacks. The four men were armed with assault rifles and fired indiscriminately at the police officers, killing at least 12 and injuring several others.

According to reports, the police who were stationed at the post were caught off guard by the sudden attack. The mourners demand that the Afghan government take immediate action to prevent such incidents from recurring.

Constitutionally, Afghanistan does not have the power to hold elections that are truly free and fair. The power to hold elections rests with the government, which has the responsibility to ensure that elections are held in a democratic manner.

The Afghan government has been facing a lot of criticism for its inability to hold free and fair elections. The government has been accused of rigging elections and preventing opposition candidates from participating.
