Elections sans Reforms Meaningless: Reform Panel

KARUL - The Electoral Reform Commission on Monday held public parliamentary elections before bringing residents to the ballot box.

Speaking to reporters later, Shakhzada Tawhidi, the panel’s deputy head, said the commission will not be an advisory body and that its members will be divided into two groups. The first group will be responsible for examining the election law and the second will work on the structure, responsibilities, and powers of electoral bodies. He said members of the commission will introduce new ways on how to prevent fraud and rigging in polling places, provincial, and district council elections.

Early, the Electoral Reform Commission formally started its work on Wednesday, when Chief Election Officer (CEO) Abdullah Abdullah said the panel would not be a symbolic body because the entire government remained committed to electoral reform. The reform is a major point of the US-led agreement between President Ashraf Ghani and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Abdullah Abdullah on a national unity government. Four months later, lawmaker Shukria Barakzai was appointed by President Ghani to head the electoral reform panel but the CEO disagreed with her appointment. On the eve of President Ghani’s declared dominance, the CEO dismissed the commission and appointing its members.

President Ghani left the head of the &quot;country-friendly relations&quot; and &quot;willingly to give up the interests of the Afghan people, but a regional phenomenon.&quot; His statements are likely to fuel the two main contenders for the country’s presidency, with the former already having been sworn in for a second term.

We have to be Cognizant!

A society that is undergoing the problem of unsustainable economic growth and inflation cannot have the extravagance of dreaming about a utopian tomorrow. Although, we keep on dreaming about an ideal future but does not realize that the people of Afghanistan are living in a specific stage of economic and political condition which can have either a positive or negative impact on their future. This situation is a resultant of each and every action taken by the government.

The government is making an effort to control the inflation but despite all its efforts, the people are still facing economical problems. People are still suffering from the economic crisis and inflation, which is having a negative impact on their daily lives.

The government is also trying to improve the situation by implementing various economic policies, but it is not enough to solve the problem. The government needs to take a more proactive approach and work towards improving the economic conditions of the people.

The government needs to focus on providing a stable and secure environment for the private sector to invest and grow. This will help to create job opportunities and improve the standard of living for the people.

The government also needs to focus on providing education and healthcare facilities to the people. These are the basic needs of the people and are essential for their overall development.

The government needs to work towards improving the infrastructure and transportation system. This will help to connect the remote areas and bring them into the mainstream of the global economy.

The government also needs to focus on increasing the focus on sustainable development and environmental protection. This will help to ensure that future generations can also enjoy the same level of prosperity.

The government needs to work towards improving the economic and social conditions of the people. This will require a long-term strategy and effort, but it is necessary for the overall development of the country.

The government also needs to focus on improving the governance and corruption levels. This will help to ensure that the resources are used efficiently and effectively.

U.S. Turkey to Strengthen Security Cooperation

WASHINGTON - U.S. President Barack Obama and Turkey President Abdullah Gul’s recent high-level discussions underscored the importance of increasing the collaboration between the two allies to counter the threat posed by Iran and its proxies in the region.

The talks, which took place in the context of their meetings on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly, focused on issues such as the Iran nuclear talks, the fight against the Islamic State and the conflict in Syria.

The two leaders discussed the importance of strengthening security cooperation, particularly in the areas of counterterrorism and counterproliferation.

GUL - In his remarks at the White House, President Gul underscored the importance of deepening ties with the U.S. and that such cooperation is necessary to address the challenges facing the region.

OBAMA - President Obama reiterated the commitment of the United States to strengthen its strategic partnership with Turkey, emphasizing the importance of working together to promote regional stability and security.

The two leaders also discussed the situation in Syria, with President Obama stating that the U.S. would continue to support the Syrian people in their fight against ISIS and other terrorist groups.

Syria Opposition Groups Agree on ‘Roadmap’ to End Civil War

BUENOS AIRES - Syrian rebels and political opposition groups, long at odds, announced Friday that they have signed a “Roadmap” to end the country’s civil war and to build a new government.

The agreement, which was signed in Amman, Jordan, by a delegation of opposition leaders, provides for the formation of a new government and an end to the war.

The “Roadmap” includes a number of key points, including the establishment of a transitional government, the participation of the opposition in the government, and the holding of democratic elections.

The deal was the result of months of negotiations between the government and the opposition, and it is seen as a significant step towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The agreement was welcomed by the international community, who hope that it will lead to a cessation of the violence and a start towards a political solution.

U.S. supports the “Roadmap” as it is the best chance to bring a peaceful end to the war in Syria.
MoD Expresses Support for Continued U.S. Presence

KARUL - Ministry of Defense Deputy Inspector General Colonel Zafar Iqbal, on Thursday reiterated the Afghan forces' commitment for financial support and extended official assistance to the United States in order to combat militancy effectively.

"We are still relying on financial aid from the international community to maintain our forces, as the United States, in order to support its training, our equipment and military," Iqbal said.

The statement was delivered a day after the United States military announced it was planning to withdraw its forces from Afghanistan, a move that could result in the death of seven soldiers.
