Fear and loathing on the streets of Kabul:

When a young man is arrested for speaking out,

When a journalist is threatened,

When a blogger is silenced,

When a defender of human rights is targeted,

Fear is the currency of our world. It is the weapon that our democracy uses to suppress free speech and free thought. It is the tool that our society uses to silence those who dare to speak up for what is right.

The world is watching.

The world is waiting for us to stand up and be counted.

The world is waiting for us to show that we are stronger than fear.

So let us stand up and reclaim our voices.

Let us stand up and be heard.

Let us stand up and fight for our rights.

Let us stand up and be counted.

Let us stand up and be free.

Let us stand up and be strong.

Let us stand up and be proud.

Let us stand up and be equal.

Let us stand up and be united.

Let us stand up and be free.
The Chronic Problem of Women

By Hujjatullah Zia

A ccording to reports, violence against women has increased by 8 percent in recent months, with the presence of American forces in Afghanistan. In the past, small-scale intimidation such as harassment, abduction, and rape occurred. However, now an increasing number of rape and violence incidents are being reported by women. The rape and rape of women in the country has increased in the past few months. The Afghan government’s response has been slow and ineffective. The Afghan government needs to take immediate action to address the issue of violence against women.

Role of Ethics in Politics

By Dilawar Sherzai

T here have been different views regarding the role of women in politics. Some people believe that women should be involved in politics, while others believe that they should be excluded from politics. Michael Chaliweli has been known for his support of women’s rights and has argued that women should be involved in political decision-making. However, there is also the view that women should not be involved in politics. This debate has been a source of controversy and is likely to continue in the future.

U.S. Warplanes to Use Turkish Bases for Anti-IS Air Raids: Report

WASHINGTON - The U.S. military is preparing to establish anti-Islamic State (IS) bases in Turkey that will allow it to launch more frequent air strikes into war-torn Syria, according to a report published on Tuesday.

The New York Times quoted anonymous U.S. officials as saying that the U.S. military is planning to "use Turkish bases in an effort to launch more frequent air strikes into war-torn Syria, targeting IS fighters and resources inside Syria."

The report suggests that the U.S. military plans to establish a network of air bases in Turkey that will be used to launch air strikes against IS targets in Syria. The report indicates that the U.S. military is looking to establish more than one air base in Turkey, with the goal of launching air strikes on a more frequent basis.

Turkey's Role in Anti-IS Efforts

Turkey has been a key ally of the U.S. in the fight against IS, providing the U.S. military with access to its airspace and allowing U.S. forces to conduct air strikes from Turkish bases. The report suggests that the U.S. military is looking to establish additional bases in Turkey to allow for more frequent and sustained air strikes against IS targets in Syria.

Implications for Syria

The establishment of additional U.S. air bases in Turkey could have significant implications for the ongoing conflict in Syria. The report suggests that the U.S. military is planning to launch more frequent air strikes against IS targets in Syria, which could lead to further destabilization of the region.
