The Persistent Rise of Civilian Casualties

By Abdul Ahad Bahrami

A recent report, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) has said that civilian casualties in Afghanistan have increased by more than 50 percent in the past year. The report has revealed that nearly 9,000 civilians were killed or injured during the first six months of 2021, stating that the conflict in Afghanistan is worsening despite efforts to bring peace, stability, and the end of the war. It said that the number of civilian deaths in Afghanistan has been "equal to or worse than" the same period last year. The report said that in the first six months of 2021, 1,221 civilians were killed and 3,292 wounded, which shows a 5% increase compared to that period last year. The report further stated that since the Taliban's assumption of power, the number of civilian casualties has increased by 17% compared to the same period in 2020.

The report also highlighted that the number of civilian casualties is on the rise despite the efforts of all parties involved in the conflict, including the Afghan government, the Taliban, and other insurgent groups. The report said that the number of civilians killed and injured in the first six months of 2021 was higher than in the same period in 2020, indicating that the government is doing less to prevent civilian casualties.
