President to Youth

Beaware of Terrorist Designs

KABUL. - In his message on the eve of International Youth Day on Wednesday, President Ashraf Ghani has warned that terror networks want to use youth as a tool to promote their nefarious designs.

The presidential message was read out by Syed Mustafa Manzoori, deputy information and cultural affairs minister, at a gathering organized by the ministry.

A number of high-ranking officials, political analysts and youth were present on the occasion.

The president congratulated Afghan youth on the day and said youth were the backbone of society and the future of the country.

He said youth suffered as well due to violence, social injustice and discrimination.

Information Minister Abdul Hadi Ishaqzai said: “Our youth have extraordinary talents and qualities which have proved over the period of time.”

Ahmadsha Massoud, the president’s special adviser for reform and good governance, said the country witnessed lost peaceful changes in the past 13 years and today “are on the way.”

Outlook Horoscope

Capricorn (Dec. 21-Jan. 19)
A course workaholic ring throughings on all in your digital devices, reminding you to include others in your latest plans as electric forces press the button in your Fifth House of Investments. Go ahead and avoid your best idea with a possible partner. Someone who respects you strongly will see the positive potential in your thinking and is likely to jump in to help you achieve your goals.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20)
Somewhere you can get away with the cluster of ideas. Today, in fact, you’ve quite liked taking an ingestion coinage to a whole new level now. Your caring can urge you to merge with someone strong, someone who can motivate you to modify some details of your plan first. This is a dangerous tendency because accomplishing something in a society can subtly wash your strategies.
The Rate of Afghanistan's Peace Process

By Abdul Abah Bahrami

The most developable in Taliban's leadership and the steady attacks targeting Kabul, the prospect of Afghanistan's peace process is getting more and more hopeful. The warring parties, including the Taliban, have mounted deadly attacks in capital Kabul, leaving hundreds of casual- ties among civilians. According to reports, the peace process remains while the Taliban are believed to be fragmented as the most powerful of the group's new leader Mullah Akram Munir. On the other hand, the recent meetings in Kabul and Doha to coordinate and mediate the peace process in Afghanistan have given new hope to the warring parties. Peace talks and discussions may be one step forward in the peace process but if the Taliban continue their violent acts and attacks, it could lead to another war.

The recent reassurance of peace efforts by the new Taliban leader was a serious blow to the peace process and the Afghan government and international community's efforts to talk about talks with the Taliban. The new Taliban leader pledged to end the violence and start a peace process. However, the Taliban's commitment to peace is not yet clear. The Afghan government will be able to overcome the distrust and receive mutual cooperation over the peace efforts and develop relations for the better peace process.

The peace process is ongoing and the Taliban's commitment to peace is still not clear. However, the Afghan government and international community are working hard to bring the Taliban to the negotiating table. The recent developments in the peace process show that the Taliban and the Afghan government are making progress towards a peace agreement.

On the other hand, the Taliban movement's key group members are still actively fighting against the Afghan government. The Taliban's leadership is divided and fragmented, and this makes it difficult to reach a peace agreement. The Taliban's commitment to peace is still not clear, and their violent acts continue to cause fear and suffering in Afghanistan.

In conclusion, the Afghan government and international community are working hard to bring the Taliban to the negotiating table. The recent developments in the peace process show that the Taliban and the Afghan government are making progress towards a peace agreement. However, the Taliban's commitment to peace is still not clear, and their violent acts continue to cause fear and suffering in Afghanistan.

NATO Denies It Is Making War more likely in Europe

BRENNIS - NATO on Wednesday defended the 5,000 troops it has sent to the Baltic states as a "rational" response to a "Russian threat." The alliance was reacting to a warning from a London conference that the war in Afghanistan had furthered the spread of Islamic terrorism and that NATO and war games targeting the Baltic states were an indication of the "Russian threat.

"We are not going to stay the course," Said a NATO official at a news conference in Washington. "The White House would not be able to go on a policy, and I'm quite confident of that." The official said the plans for the currently 5,000 NATO troops in the area were a response to the perceived threat from Russia, which it saw as a "Russian threat." The official explained that NATO was taking a "rational" approach, and that the spread of Islamic terrorism was a "Russian threat." The official added that the war in Afghanistan was not a "Russian threat.

Turkey Denies Warplanes from Incurilr Air base join anti-IS Strike in Syria

ANKARA - Turkish Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu said on Wednesday that Turkey would be sending fighter jets to join an international coalition against Islamic State (IS) in Syria, adding that the decision was "in the national interest.

"We have been discussing this for a long time, but we have come to the conclusion that it is in the interests of Turkey and our allies," Cavusoglu told CNN's Acar. "We are ready to do this, and we will do it.

"This is a decision that we have taken for the sake of our country and our allies. We are not doing this for the sake of any other country.

"Turkey." Turkey's government on Wednesday confirmed that it had sent fighter jets to join the anti-Islamic State coalition in Syria, the first time Turkey has officially joined the international military campaign against the extremist group.

"We have decided to join the coalition with a view to supporting our allies and partners in the fight against the terrorist groups," the Turkish government said in a statement.

"This is a historic moment for Turkey, and we are glad to be able to contribute to the global effort against terrorism."

130 Nangarhar Residents in Daesh Custody

JALALABAD - Cashing in recent footage released by Daesh that purportedly shows the infiltration of 10 Afghan citizens of ethnically Pashtun origin in east Nangarhar province on Wednesday and said that 130 of their core members are themselves in Daesh custody.

Trabal elders in Nangarhar warn that the hostages face grave if the government does not take steps to save their lives.

The footage, released two days ago, paints a horrific picture of how the hostages are being blown up by Daesh. The video's caption reads, "We are going to exterminate and destroy them all among Afghan worldwide."

The Taliban government has condemned the Daesh act as a violation, saying that such an act is totally unacceptable.

Meanwhile, Malik Kazem, one of the tribal elders of Achin district, said the 130 people were from Achin and behind districts of Nangarhar. A massive operation is underway in two areas, who have been displaced by Daesh and whose family members are in Daesh custody.

"No human has witnessed such a brutal act as Daesh did against civilians in Nangarhar which was seen in footage," said Kazem, a resident of Nangarhar.

Another resident of Nangarhar, Haji Gul Ahmad, said: "Daesh has captured in Nangarhar and has tal-"mato more than 100 hostages."

He added: "We call for government to rescue the hostages."
