Election is the process by which a member of a community or nation chooses their leaders in democratic society, therefore such an election should be free and fair to ensure that the leaders are acceptable to all members of the society therefore election should be based on freedom to citizens in order to have full participation in the election process they should also have the right to vote secretly without vote buying.

In the last elections held for presidency, provincial and parliamentary councils over the past decade, we have learned about the range of structural flaws, logistical limitations and demographic changes which need to be upgraded and improved. One of the key democratic mandates has to be institutionalized, that is we need radical reforms and electoral laws is fundamental to this.

The three elections held a crucial need for Afghan electoral laws to emerged after the former presidential election. Nonetheless, the developments of the three elections do not yet seem to the real reason for the delay. Delays again and again controversy the issues of national electoral law and the popularization of everyday issues in the given time. It is witnessed when everyone is talking about electoral law. The electoral laws are held problematic with the women's quota in law, which is now not in a role in ethnic balance of the electoral bodies and ultimately, the delay is to turn the optimum of electoral cycle. Law as a tool to fulfill the constitutional mandate of the parliament taking the finalization of the current form before the finalization of the national elections.

The parliamentary elections are not to be held this year and the year did not extend by the results of the electoral reform consultation. Parliamentary elections are a difficult challenge - given that there are no set electoral rules - accomplishes the state of affairs. Without such electoral rules the condition of parliamentary elections will be a difficult and challenging task. Afghanistan's legislative government must get committed to implementing a comprehensive program of reforms to empower the Afghan parliamentaries, thereby making the vision of the Constitution a daily reality for the people of Afghanistan. The quality of the country is strengthened by a genuine political partnership between the President and the Parliament and the constitutional legitimacy of the national elections.

The election is the only way to turn the current reality into a political formula and ensure the implementation of the constitutional rights which are the basic democratic rights. The election is important to ensure the legitimacy of the government and to ensure the implementation of the laws and regulations which are necessary for the development of the country.
