Escalated Militancy Poes Stronger Threat

By Hajjullah Zia

The Taliban insurgents' latest round of terror to national security via making heavy incursions into Afghanistan. In the last six months, about 2,000 more police and civilian casualties have been reported, with a further 6,000 people killed or wounded in Afghanistan alone. Moreover, according to the UN, about 23,000 people in Afghanistan were killed or injured in the first three months of 2023. The trend of violence is worsening, and the Taliban have been growing stronger in recent years. According to the UN, the Taliban now control about 40% of Afghanistan's territory, and their influence has spread to many other regions.

The Taliban's main goal is to take over Afghanistan and establish a theocratic state. They have been involved in a long and brutal war with the Afghan government and the international community. The Taliban are mostly composed of Pashtuns from the southern provinces of Afghanistan. They have been fighting against the government for decades and have gained a significant foothold in many parts of the country.

The major reason behind the escalation of violence is the failure of the Afghan government to address the root causes of the conflict. The Afghan government has failed to provide basic services to the people, such as education, healthcare, and infrastructure. This has led to widespread frustration and anger among the Afghan people, who see the government as corrupt and ineffective.

The ongoing violence in Afghanistan is a threat to regional stability and security. The Taliban's expansion into neighboring countries, such as Pakistan and Iran, has raised concerns about the potential for a wider conflict in the region. The US and its allies have been working to find a diplomatic solution to the conflict, but so far, there has been little progress.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex and challenging. The Taliban have been able to exploit divisions within the Afghan government and international community, and they continue to gain ground in many parts of the country. The Afghan people are suffering greatly, and the situation requires urgent attention and action from the international community.

10 Afghan refugees returned through the "One Stop Center (OSC)" in Pakistan this year, which makes 10 percent of the total 100,000 refugees who have returned so far to Afghanistan. From Feb. 18, Pakistani authorities have been conducting a registration process for Afghan refugees who want to return to Afghanistan. According to one official, more than 2,000 Afghan refugees had registered for return so far. The registration process is expected to continue for another two months. The participants discussed at the length of the temporary return. (Paragaphes 7-8)

Divided Europe Faces Mounting Migrant Crisis

Brussels - With its worst head yet of 2015, World War II Europe has moved beyond the point of no return, dealing with people fleeing war, persecution, and famine, and there's no sign that this is the end. As German leaders seek to coordinate EU Action on Migrant Crisis, the Migrant Threat in Europe, which now includes the refugee crisis and the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region, has become a major challenge for the EU. The refugee crisis is now the most significant migration crisis in the EU, with over 1 million refugees and migrants arriving in Europe in 2015. The EU has been able to host a large number of refugees, but concerns about the long-term integration of refugees and migrants remain.

US, Israel, and Iran Never War?: Leader

The White House and the Israeli government have agreed to a ceasefire in the current conflict in Syria. The agreement is seen as a major step in the ongoing efforts to end the conflict, which has lasted for over five years and has caused the displacement of millions of people.
