Abdullah to Represent Afghanistan at UNGA

Doctors had advised the president not to visit long enough, and it's very, very important that he be there for at least a couple of days. The U.S. general assembly was held at the UN headquarters in New York, where doctors had advised him not to visit most of the time.

Meanwhile, Javed Faisal, the CEO of Pakistan, confirmed that he would be representing Afghanistan at the UN general assembly.

E-NIC Rolllout in Limbo Pending Meeting Between NUG Leaders

Meanwhile, an MP from Herat, Mohammad Reza Khosravi, said: "Those who are building back this process should be re-elected by government and their names should be made public because we will face serious problems in future if the process does not start soon." The officials believe that the Afghan government has to gradually reduce their assistance.

While a number of important meetings and declarations that the president and the CEO needed to discuss have been kicked off, the process to launch the E-NIC is not started yet. The E-NIC authorities are completely ready to start rolling out the identity cards, but according to the president and the CEO, the process to start the E-NIC is still pending.

TAGHIZAI CITY - The central jail chief officer has been arrested following a brazen Taliban attack that left hundreds of inmates and one officer dead on Tuesday. The Taliban stormed the central jail in Ghazni City on Monday, and numerous inmates were killed. The attack on the Afghan National Police headquarters in Ghazni was carried out by a group of around 150 fighters, who were said to be armed with guns and throwing hand grenades. The attack lasted for around 10 hours, and the Taliban fighters managed to take control of the police station.

During the attack, several Afghan police officers were killed, and the Taliban fighters captured a number of vehicles and weapons from the police. The Taliban fighters also occupied a number of buildings in the city, including a police station and a hospital.

The attack on the central jail in Ghazni City is the worst incident of its kind in the country, and it has caused outrage among the Afghan people and international leaders. The Taliban fighters have been accused of committing serious human rights violations, and the attack has been condemned by the Afghan government and the international community.

The Taliban fighters have also targeted other government institutions and security forces in the country, and they have been active in various parts of the country, including the northern provinces of Baghlan and Jowzjan.

The emotional wall you are worshiping may turn out to be a devilish obstacle. Use your time this morning to get a handle on it. You might, for example, feel you are being pushed into something you don't want to do. If that's the case, try to figure out what is driving the force behind it. It may be that it is being powered by an underlying need to protect yourself from something. If so, you may need to do some work to get to the bottom of the need. Otherwise, you may find yourself feeling more and more frustrated with the situation. It is important that you try to deal with the issue head on rather than avoiding it. If you do, you may find that you can make progress in a more positive direction.
The Growing Rift Between Warring Parties

By Haji Jalal Zia

Despite rivalry between the soft-styled Islamic State in Iraq and Afghanistan (ISIJ) and the Taliban, the Afghan government, under President Ashraf Ghani, has been actively supporting both groups in their struggle against each other. The situation has escalated to the point where the Afghan authorities are facing increased threats from both sides. The Afghan government's stance has been to support the ISIJ in the north and the Taliban in the south, leading to a growing rift between the two sides.

The government's support for the ISIJ has been criticized for fueling the conflict and increasing violence in the country. The Taliban, on the other hand, have been accused of using the support from the government to expand their influence and gain territory.

The growing rift between the two sides has led to increased tensions and violence in the country. The Afghan government has been criticized for its inability to effectively manage the situation and for its lack of a clear strategy to resolve the conflict.

Meanwhile, the Taliban have been accused of using violence and intimidation to control areas under their influence. The government's support for the ISIJ has also been criticized for its role in fueling the conflict and increasing violence in the country.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex and requires a comprehensive approach to resolve the conflict. The Afghan government needs to reassess its strategy and work towards a peaceful resolution that takes into account the needs and interests of all parties involved.

Syria: A Dying Nation

By Manish Rai

It is now more than four years since it began. The full-blown civil war in Syria has left 250,000 people dead, half of them civilians. In addition to the human toll, the conflict has also plunged the country into a state of political, economic, and social crisis. The country has been torn apart, with various factions vying for power and control.

The Syrian government, led by President Bashar al-Assad, has faced international pressure to end the conflict, but has so far refused to negotiate a solution. The United Nations has warned that the conflict is a humanitarian crisis, with widespread destruction of infrastructure and loss of civilian lives.

The situation in Syria is dire, and the international community must work together to find a peaceful resolution to the conflict. This requires a multi-faceted approach that addresses the root causes of the conflict and provides support to those affected by the war.

The Syrian government must also take steps to address the needs of the civilian population and ensure their safety. The international community must provide necessary support to the Syrian people, including humanitarian aid and assistance to those who have been displaced by the conflict.

The conflict in Syria is complex and requires a comprehensive approach to resolve. The international community must work together to find a peaceful resolution that addresses the needs of all parties involved.

The Growing Rift between Warring Parties

By Hujjatullah Zia

Despite rivalries between the well-entrenched Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) and the Zionist regime, both groups have been embroiled in a conflict that has claimed thousands of lives. In recent years, ISIL and the Zionist regime have been at loggerheads over control of territory in Iraq and Syria. ISIL has been accused of perpetrating atrocities against civilians, while the Zionist regime has been criticized for its policies towards the Palestinian people. The two groups have been in a constant state of war, with neither able to gain the upper hand.

The quest for power and control has been the driving force behind their conflict, with both groups seeking to expand their influence. ISIL has been able to consolidate its power in many parts of Iraq and Syria, while the Zionist regime has been able to maintain its control over a significant portion of the region. This dynamic has fueled a cycle of violence and instability that has lasted for years.

The conflict has also drawn in other players, including the United States and Russia, who have been involved in efforts to mediate the conflict. Despite these efforts, the situation remains tense and unstable, with both sides continuing to engage in military operations and terror attacks.

The growing rift between ISIL and the Zionist regime is a cause for concern, as it has the potential to escalate into a full-blown war. It is crucial for the international community to take action to prevent this from happening and to work towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The Ghazni Prison Break

The rising incidence of organized crime in various parts of the country makes such headlines in the media frequently nowadays that depict the fact that the situation is getting really dangerous. From now on, no security situation is not kept in check, the possibilities of a chaotic and disorderlaced future will turn to reality. It is really gloomy to see that the situation is deteriorating and getting worse after so much resistance on the part of the national and international authorities.

Taliban now every now and then show their strength by making some astonish- ing attacks in different parts of the country, particularly on Afghan National Security Forces and their facilities. On Monday morning Taliban insurgents stored a maximum security prison in the capital of Ghazni province, releasing 350 prisoners, of which 120 are women, in a brazen attack, posing a serious threat to national security.

According to officials, the prison housed 434 prisoners in total; out of which 325 escaped during the attack. Moreover, the officials added that an incident similar to this attack happened at about 2 am Monday when an insurgent detona- tor exploded at the prison entrance, which resulted in the arresting and the securing them the facility. TheMail said seven security members were killed and seven others were wounded.

In addition to a total of five insurgents killed in the incident.

Taliban also after the incident released a statement on the attack. The statement is this incident of low intensity looking large in the country. When a high-profile prison, which should have such strong security arrange- ments that thinking of breaking it should never be considered as an option by the insurgents, is broken so easily by them, promising the Taliban hasty people that their safety is one very difficult task. How can the forces prevent the security to others when they cannot prevent security to their own facilities and their citizens?

Moreover, the map released by the Taliban released by the forces that are considered threats to national security. They are now large and will be free to carry out their activities on the national security of the country. The Taliban has released a total of 434 prisoners in total, which is a significant number, giving the Taliban more freedom to carry out their activities.

Wired Jagha in his session on the same day, lamented the Interior Ministry (MoI) over the attack, suggesting the Interior Minister should comment on the incident in his capacity as the Home Minister, and the house should deal with the authorities concerned in accordance with the law.

Wired Jagha Speaker Abdul Karim Wabidi said the attack has made the people of Ghazni worried and that the Taliban should be alerted about the possibility of similar attacks. He thanked the Interior Ministry for its response, saying that the Interior Ministry has also been ordering police and security forces to prevent similar attacks.

The people of Afghanistan are worried about their safety and security, as the Taliban has been a threat for years. The Taliban is a militant organization that has been fighting against the government for years, and they hope that they would have a clear path for the future.

The Taliban has been involved in violence and terrorism, and they have been targeting security forces and civilians in various parts of the country.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex and challenging, with both sides continuing to engage in military operations and terror attacks. Despite these efforts, the situation remains tense and unstable, with both sides continuing to engage in military operations and terror attacks.
Risk of Penetration of Terrorist Groups Increases: Putin

BISHKEK - The risk of penetration of the terrorist groups into the countries neighboring with Afghanistan has increased, said President of Kyrgyzstan Almazbek Atambayev at the CSTO summit in Dushanbe on Tuesday.

“We are concerned about the situation in Afghanistan, International Security Assistance Forces was in this country for a long time, and made some efforts, including the positive work, but in the end, it did not bring the final qualitative improvement of the situation,” said Putin.

After the withdrawal of the main part of foreign troops, the situation in the country is degrading, according to him. The territory of the Islamic State went far beyond Iraq and Syria. Terrorists organize small operations, create chaos and poverty of people, destroy cultural monuments, religious institutions, added Putin.

“We support the government of Syria in counteraction to terrorist aggression. We provided and will provide necessary military and technical assistance and call upon other countries to join us,” President Putin said.

“I would like to note that people flee from hostilities in Syria, which were largely imposed from outside through supplies of weapons and other special equipment. People flee from atrocities of terrorists,” President Putin underscored. (AP/REUTER)
