No Room for Peace Talk

The recent desnaturism is unlikely to be a guarantee for the Afghani community, as it is a move that will not help them solve their problems, but rather exacerbate them. It will only create more traupas for the nation and our nation suffers from relentless violence and military oppression. The Taliban leadership’s move to allow minorities to take part in the elections has opened the doors for more conflict and violence to erupt in the country. After all, the emergence of the Taliban in the 1990s was a result of their desire to bring peace and stability to the region. This is a tragedy of the people of Afghanistan who are suffering from constant violence and war.

The Afghan government has always been a partner in the efforts to resolve the conflict in Afghanistan, and that is why it is important to continue striving for a peaceful resolution to the conflict. The Afghan people are tired of war and they want peace. The Taliban’s statement that they will not participate in the elections is a major setback for the peace process. It is clear that the Taliban are not interested in finding a peaceful solution to the conflict.

American Officials Want 'Steep' Increase in Syrian Refugees Admitted by U.S.

WASHINGTON — A senior American official said on Thursday that the United States was likely to face a "steep" increase in Syrian refugees in the coming weeks and that the government was preparing to accept up to 20,000 in the next 12 months.

President Barack Obama last week committed the United States to taking in its share of the 20,000 refugees who are expected to escape the conflict in Syria. The administration's goal is to bring the refugees to America by the end of the year.

"We are preparing to take in 20,000 refugees over the next year," the official, who asked not to be identified, said. "We are preparing to do that.

The official said the White House was working with humanitarian organizations to determine who would be the first to come to America. The White House has not yet determined where the refugees will be housed or how they will be processed.

The White House has also not yet determined how many refugees will be admitted to the United States in the next 12 months.
