(11) Taliban in Afghanistan have been making advances during the past year, as they have begun to surround and take positions in the northwestern province of Kunduz. This is a significant development for the Taliban, as it is the first time they have taken control of a major urban area in Afghanistan. The Taliban's advances have come as a result of increased military pressure from the Afghan government and the United States, as well as a lack of resources and support from the international community. The Taliban have been able to capitalize on this situation by taking advantage of the Afghan government's weakened position in the region.

(12) The Taliban have declared their intention to take control of the city of Kunduz, and have begun to prepare for a full-scale attack. The city is strategically important, as it serves as a major transport hub for the region, and as a gateway to the rest of the country. The Taliban have been able to reach the city by taking advantage of the Afghan government's weakened position in the region, and as a result, they have been able to gain control of the city.
