No One Can Justify Taliban Crimes

KARUL - The Chief Executive of the National Unity Government (NUG) Abdullah Abdullah on Sunday said that the Taliban’s crimes are being justified by some elements within government who also try to cover up these deeds.

He said that no one has the right to justify crimes committed by the Taliban.

He added that insurgents do not recognize religion, nation or tribe and that they kill people indiscriminately.

He accepted the government's shortcomings in the fall of Kunduz, saying that a number of clans within government—knowingly or unknowingly—justified Taliban's crimes. "It will not be allowed to justify the Taliban's crimes. We all know that terrorism does not recognize religion, nation or tribe. It is unfortunate that some of our people justified the government's failure," Abdullah said.

He said Kunduz residents were warned months ago that their province will face such a fate, but the government did not pay enough attention to this matter. Meanwhile, at least 40 residents on Monday carried out a sit in along roads near the Provincial House in Kabul, saying that they lost everything in the Kunduz battle. They claimed that—More on PA-

Outlook Horizon

- Strong emotional current flows into you today, and you may feel a particularly imminent and powerful welling up of your emotions, which may very well make you appear to a particular group of feelings, which may be particularly evident to you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

- You are engaged in your work today, especially if you are particularly skilled at what you are doing. You may find yourself feeling very productive and efficient. However, be aware that you may need to pace yourself, as you may be working too hard.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

- It’s not appropriate in the current emotional environment to apply the same managerial skills you might use to handle your business. Your attempts at controlling the dynamic forces could bring the raw feelings that need to express themselves. This is not the time to be overly demanding or stubbornly-static; instead, acknowledge any negativity, shame or guilt that may be emerging.

Power struggles will likely be the most pressing issue this week, with the potential for significant conflicts between you and others. You may need to find ways to defuse these tensions, or to find a compromise that works for everyone.

We Love All the Afghans!

By Muhammad Rasool Shah

W ith every sneer, every tweet, every post and every share, the trend of vilifying Afghans and deepening the divide between them and others is not just taboo but disgusting. The language used is not only unworthy of the era but also completely unproductive. Everyone’s voices have almost achieved their target. They are, once again, going to divide the society. This is an affront to the humanity and language and push theallisens into a civil war against each other. It is because of this that we are using our terrorist tools in their hands to make their dreams come true.

There have been such attempts in past as well but before we got into the trap. All started when a number of people came into the streets, demanding that words ‘Afghan’ and ‘Islam’ should be included in the upcoming incorporated National Loyalty Card. But,齿less, two or more groups may have different viewpoints but this does not mean that there should be talks and limits and talk against the unity and solidarity of the country.

On the occasion of Eid al-Adha and bomb attack in August, a large number of videos and posts were shared that were against different ethnic groups. Similarly, the incident of Kunduz gave our enemies another opportunity to make the people talk against each other. On all these occasions, no baseless and irresponsible remarks were passed on almost all the social networking sites especially Facebook. Members of different groups were tactfully drawn to talk against each other and they first divided the society. Then the country should be divided into different groups on the basis of race or language. Of course, this has its own logic and point.

Different group targeted the language, religious beliefs, traditions or elders of each other. A war of words breaks out in which all the liquids of language and wisdom were crossed and respect for fellow citizens and humanity was left aside.

As I mentioned before, it was painful to many who were under the attack of the Afghan families. The eternal silence and ignoring the call to Allah to save the country of another blood.

As expected, common people on both sides were not wise enough to understand the situation and were mistaken. They thought that they were either afraid of telling the truth and disclosing the plain and plain news of the world or they made their lives of no importance.

Whatever the reason is, it is still not too late and should immediately start the action.

We have to learn from our realties. For many decades, people of different groups have been living together peacefully and they also enjoy the diversity in language and culture. In almost all the provinces and cities of the country, Pashtuns, Tajiks, Hazaras, Uzbeks, Turkmen and others have lived together. They have shared the same food, water, electricity, roads, schools, hospitals, malls and shops with each other. They have even strengthened the bonds by divulging a lot of cultures and social traditions. In this process, there has never been any problem in this unity. It is because of a strong bond that the enemies and other groups have been failed to cut it out. They have used this narrow-mindedness to increase the limited number of differences.

O ur society is full of young people who equal share in education and working in public and private sector. This is a valuable asset of the country. They are the few points that once I mentioned in one of my previous articles as well. The biggest factor feeding the terrorism and running against organizations like Taliban is the heavy funding and strategic support. In case of Taliban, this is provided by a number of international and other terrorist groups operating in our country as their battlefield. The extremism or promotion of radical thoughts and sentiment is not possible without the presence of education. The reason why, the areas backlogged and less educated become the best places for the Taliban and other terrorist groups who are crowded with different groups of religion for their objectives. In Afghanistan, Pakistan and a number of other countries, this fact has been found that less educated and backwater areas provide the workforce for terror organizations working on the name of religion. In Afghanistan, unemployment and poverty is also one of the major reasons of the Taliban and other terrorist groups operating in these areas.

If we truly love our country and want to see it as a developed country, we should provide education to all. We should correct the wrong acts. All of us should avoid any post, video or any other practice that hurts the harm among different groups. We should also boycott all the practices that support and permit this poisonous idea.

The responsible and educated minds of society who can change public opinion should protest wisely and lead the different ethnic groups.

ISIL Poses a Threat to Afghanistan

By Hujjatullah Zia

The current situation in Iraq and Levant (ISIL) poses a threat to Afghanistan. In the last few months, ISIL has significantly expanded its operations in northern parts of the country and has been coming closer to the border between Afghanistan and Iraq, which is highly dangerous. The presence of ISIL in Afghanistan is a significant threat to the national security of the country.

ISIL is a terrorist organization that operates in Iraq and Syria and is considered a threat to the stability and security of these countries. It has been involved in numerous acts of violence and terrorism, including attacks on civilian targets, beheadings, and outras. The group is led by Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, who declared the establishment of a caliphate in Iraq and Syria in 2014.

In Afghanistan, ISIL has been active in the eastern and northern provinces, such as Nangarhar and Kunar. The group has been involved in attacks on the Afghan government forces and has been targeting the Afghan civil society and the media. The group has also been involved in the recruitment of local fighters, who are often young and vulnerable to radical ideologies.

The threat posed by ISIL to Afghanistan is not only a regional issue but also a global one. Afghanistan is a key player in the fight against terrorism and is a crucial ally in the region. The United States and other Western countries have been providing military and financial support to the Afghan government to combat the Afghan Taliban and other Taliban-affiliated groups. However, the presence of ISIL in Afghanistan poses a significant challenge to the stability and security of the region.

The Afghan government has been working closely with the international community and other regional countries to combat the threat posed by ISIL. The government has been coordinating with the United States, NATO forces, and other international partners to combat the threat.

In conclusion, the threat posed by ISIL to Afghanistan is a serious concern that requires the attention of the Afghan government and the international community. The Afghan government must continue to work with the international community to combat the threat posed by ISIL and ensure the stability and security of the region.

The US administration is working with the United Nations and other partners to ensure that food aid is delivered to those in need."
WASHINGTON - President Obama is seriously weighing a plan to keep as many as 140,000 U.S. troops in Afghanistan beyond 2014, according to senior U.S. officials, a move that would abandon the administration's goal to end U.S. military involvement there by the finish of the fiscal year.

The plan presented in August by Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would focus primarily on winning the war and preparing for a transition of the conflict against the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria. The United States has no formal deadline for its military withdrawal.

Obama has made no final decision on the proposal, which was developed before the administration announced last month, the first major Afghan city to fall in the Taliban since the war began in 2001. Afghan security forces, supported by American planes and combat advisers, have since been able to retake it, not all of it, of the city. But the initial Afghan army in Kunar has had long-standing warships that Afghan forces lack the manpower to support logistics, and intelligence and targeting is provided by the U.S. forces.

After U.S. service members left the military air base in 2012, the 3,000 to 5,000 troops remained in Kunar from December's proposal would be one part of an emerging plan for a global counterterrorism force, developed after the Islamic State’s rampage thrust of 1995. Gen. John Campbell, the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan, has developed an army in five operations that range from large-scale enemy forces to as many 1,000 soldiers.

Taliban pledges to web site:

“Taliban in 2014 announced that the US army was its target and in the incident and the air strike assault were not called on their behalf, contrary to previous statements from the US military.
