Migrants, Refugees Continue to Arrive by Boat in Yemen Despite Conflict: UN

GENEVA — Close to 70,000 refugees, asylum-seekers and migrants, mainly originating from Ethiopia and Somalia, have arrived in Yemen by boat so far this year, according to the UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) on Tuesday.

Despite the ongoing conflict, which has seen some 1.6 million civilians killed and injured, the UNHCR has noted that arrivals have taken place since the beginning of March this year, with over 10,000 migrants, particularly vulnerable, as they are often on board of vessels that could be of limited capacity to carry all passengers safely. The agency has observed that some 35 of the passengers were women, and a significant number of the movements were perceived as being counterfeit or irregular.

Earthquake Leaves Scores of Kabul Families Homeless

KARUL - Residents in some parts of Kabul, whose houses were damaged on Monday's 7.5 magnitude earthquake, said they spent most of the night out in the open as their homes are not habitable calling on government to step in and help then.

Some said they did not have the means to rebuild their houses and appealed for government assistance.

However, the head of a seven-member family said, he cannot move his family back into their home because of the structural damage caused during the quake. He said rain done could easily cause it to collapse.

The winter is coming. Our house has been damaged in the earthquake. We do not have money to reconstruct it," said Hayatullah, another Kabul resident. Naib, who lives in Shor Bazar said: Most of the houses in our area were damaged. All the area and the house and our houses in Shor Bazar area of Kabul have been seriously damaged today.

Britain to Keep 450 Troops in Afghanistan Through 2016

LONDON - Britain's defence secretary says the country will keep about 450 soldiers in Afghanistan through 2016, following a similar announcement by the United States to extend its military presence there.

Michael Fallon said Tuesday that British military personnel will continue to carry out non-combat roles, including the training and support of the Afghan army.

He said the decision follows a review of Britain's commitment to support the performances of Afghan security forces. President Barack Obama announced earlier this month that the US will keep 1,500 troops in Afghanistan when his forces withdraw in 2017, giving US focus more time to train the Afghan army and keep up the hunt for remnants of the al-Qaida network.
