36% of Afghanistan Population under Poverty Line

Some are said to believe that if the government and donor countries have invested in infrastructure projects in the past 14 years, the country would not have this problem. "This is a disappointing figure," a large number of Afghans are under poverty line. The government must have tried to solve this problem in the past," Ali Shamlin, Teacher of University said. Afghanistan is one of the most impoverished nations in Asia. With its low population living below the poverty line, Afghanistan is one of the poorest country. (ATN)

Turning Towards India for Military Assistance an Essential Need: MPs

The aspiration is a small but significant deal making a shift in Kabul’s loyalty for allies that have long been on Pakistan. "Secondly, the Afghan government should not rely on non-state actors like the Taliban for security forces," Hafizullah Alizada, a member of the Afghan Peace Council, said. Afghanistan has been battling for years to secure its borders from terrorist organizations and drug trafficking. Pakistan has been accused of supporting the Taliban and other extremist groups in the region. However, Pakistan has denied these allegations and has condemned such activities. Pakistan has been working with other countries to bring stability to the region and ensure peace and security for all. (More on Pg. 19)

Afghanistan Supports Unofficial Dialogue with Pakistan: Envoy

Afghanistan's envoy to Islamabad, Jihangir Bakhsh Khan, said that Afghanistan is willing to engage in unofficial dialogue with Pakistan to resolve their differences. "We believe in dialogue and peaceful resolution of conflicts," Khan said. (More on Pg. 19)

Insecurity Risks and Civilian Suffer

The insecurity is on the rise in Afghanistan and the future seems increasingly uncertain. The government has not been able to stem the tide of violence and with each passing day the situation is getting worse.

With the withdrawal of international security forces there were hopes that Afghan security forces would shoulder the security responsibility and ensure the safety of the people. But it seems that the situation is not improving.

The attacks and violence in the capital Kabul are a clear indication of this. The situation has deteriorated to the extent that people are now afraid to go out on the streets.

Insecurity is not just limited to Kabul. The situation is also worsening in other parts of the country. The government needs to take stronger measures to ensure the safety of its citizens.

Trilateral Optimism over Peace Talks

By Hajjulillah Zia

According to Afghan Deputy Chief Executive Mohammad Amran, Afghanistan and Pakistan have agreed to hold talks with Taliban to achieve peace in the region.

The talks are expected to start soon and will be held in Jakarta, Indonesia. The two countries have a common interest in stabilizing the region and ending the violence.

The talks are expected to focus on reducing tensions and finding a peaceful resolution to the conflict. The two countries hope that the talks will bring an end to the instability and violence that has been raging in the region for years.

A sustainable solution can only be achieved through political means. This is also China's policy, says the deputy chief executive. We hope that the talks will be successful and bring peace to the region.

Afghanistan and Pakistan are both important countries in the region and any progress in the talks can have a positive impact on the region as a whole.

The talks are being held in Jakarta, Indonesia, as the two countries have a good relationship with Indonesia. The Indonesian government has a reputation for mediating in disputes and conflicts.

The talks are expected to be held in the coming weeks and will involve representatives from Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Indonesia.

The talks are expected to be a significant step towards ending the violence and instability in the region.

Climate Change: Deteriorating

By Rahmat Sharif

The rapid increase in global temperatures over the past century is a clear indication of the ongoing climate crisis. The effects of climate change are becoming increasingly evident, with extreme weather events becoming more frequent and severe.

The Paris Agreement, signed in 2015, aims to limit global warming to below 2°C above pre-industrial levels and to pursue efforts to limit the temperature increase to 1.5°C. However, the actions taken so far by many countries have failed to meet this goal.

The increasing temperatures are leading to a rise in sea levels, which is causing a significant threat to low-lying coastal areas. The melting of the polar ice caps is also contributing to the rise in sea levels.

The increasing temperatures are also affecting the weather patterns, causing more frequent and intense heatwaves, droughts, and floods. These events are leading to significant loss of lives and property.

The effects of climate change are felt across the globe, with some regions experiencing more severe effects than others. However, it is clear that urgent action is needed to address this crisis.

President Obama has committed the United States to reducing its greenhouse gas emissions by 26-28% below 2005 levels by 2025. Other countries have also set targets for reducing their emissions, but it remains to be seen whether these targets will be met.

The United Nations Climate Change Conference, to be held in Paris in December, offers a chance for countries to come together and agree on a framework that will help to mitigate the effects of climate change.

If action is not taken, billions of people will suffer the consequences of extreme weather events. It is therefore crucial to act now to reduce our carbon footprint and take steps towards a more sustainable future.

Ministers from NATO countries have called for a decision to halt (or at least decide on the future of) the situation in Afghanistan. The situation has come to a head as the NATO mission in Afghanistan is due to end in 2014. The decision will have implications for the situation in Afghanistan, both internally and internationally.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex and difficult. There are many factors at play, including political, economic, and social issues. The Taliban and other insurgent groups continue to operate in the country, and there is a need for stability and security.

The United States and other countries have a stake in the outcome of the situation in Afghanistan. The US has invested heavily in the country over the past decade, and there is a need for a stable and secure environment for the US military and civilian personnel who have been deployed there.
