Taliban is a Real Threat

President Ashraf Ghani in Kabul is said that the Taliban and Daesh is a real threat for Afghanistan and for the region.

Speaking at Namibaya University in Kabul, Ghani said the recent Taliban attack in Kunduz shows that the Afghan people are not in favor of the Taliban and that if the insurgent group want the support of the people they need to come up with a democratic plan.

"The Taliban is a real threat. This is not a national issue only for Afghans, Afghan and Pakistan Taliban have changed into a threat for South Asian countries. They are problem creators. I am ready to hand over the government to them through a democratic process."

He said despite changes within the Taliban following the meeting in Norway, with civilian officials earlier this year, the recent attacks in Kunduz by the group has made them extremely unpopular among the people.

"Several attacks in Kunduz revealed that human rights violations by the group were perpetrated by the people especially as a number of changes had been detected on the group's radar since the Norwegian meeting."

UN Approves 'all Necessary Measures' to Fight Daesh

NEW YORK - The UN Security Council on Friday authorized countries to "take all necessary measures" to fight the Daesh group in a resolution that won unanimous backing a week after the Paris attacks.

The measure drafted by France calls on all UN member states to "negotiate and coordinate their efforts to prevent and suppress terrorist attacks" committed by Daesh and other extremist groups linked to Al-Qaeda.

French President Francois Hollande welcomed the adoption, saying the resolution would "help modify the narrative to Daesh", which has claimed responsibility for the attacks that left 130 dead in Paris.

KABUL - The speaker of the Wolesi Jirga, Lower House of Parliament, and other MPs are ready to join security forces on the battlefield if needed.

The MPs said in their Saturday session that they were extremely concerned about the increased insecurity in the country and warned the Taliban would wage more equipment and weapons by taking control of districts.

"If no attention is paid to Kabul, Nangarhar, Badakhshan and Kunduz security situation, then it will become difficult for the government to stop Taliban from area to militiamen," said Soaldan, MP from Ghor.

"Taliban left to the Taliban two days ago. This group has collapsed three times in the past few months but government has not learnt any lessons," said Ali Reza Qulai, MP from Badakhshan.

"We urge all other MPs, except the governor to hold a special meeting on security council, to find an effective way to overcome security challenges in the country."

"If needed we are ready to stay besides our security forces in the battlegrounds and defend the country," said Abdul Rasoul Ensafi, a Wolesi Jirga speaker.

"MPs also said winter is a good time for security force members to come up with a strategy to stamp out insurgency during next year's fighting season."

UK to Provide £9m to Support Rural Afghan Girls' Education

KARJU - The United Kingdom has pledged to grant £9 million pounds to support girls' education in rural areas of Afghanistan.

Afghanistan’s Mining Sector

By Dilawar Sherzai

The mining sector in Afghanistan, it is hoped, could provide a significant boost to the economy. However, the sector is still nascent and faces several challenges. The government needs to develop policies and regulations to ensure that mining activities are carried out in a sustainable and equitable manner.

In recent years, the mining sector in Afghanistan has attracted significant interest from international investors. The government has been keen to exploit the country’s vast mineral resources, which are estimated to be worth trillions of dollars. However, the sector faces several challenges, including regulatory frameworks, access to capital, and the need for skilled labor.

The government has been working to address these challenges by implementing new policies and regulations. In 2014, the government passed the Mining Law, which provides a framework for the exploration and exploitation of mineral resources. The law aims to ensure that mining activities are carried out in a sustainable and equitable manner.

The government has also been working to improve access to capital for mining companies. In 2015, the government signed a memorandum of understanding with a foreign company to invest in a large copper mine in the country. The government hopes that this will set a precedent for other foreign companies to invest in the country.

Despite these efforts, the mining sector in Afghanistan still faces significant challenges. The sector is still in its infancy, and there is a need for more skilled labor and capital. The government needs to continue to work with international partners to develop the sector and ensure that mining activities are carried out in a sustainable and equitable manner.
