Nearly 200 Nations Near a Deal to Slow Global Warming

LE BOURGET - France presented negotiations from nearly 200 nations with what it called a "final draft" of an unprecedented climate deal to slow global warming and urged them to approve it on Saturday. The deal would slow rising temperatures and sea levels, and eventually hold man-made emissions to the levels that nature can absorb.

If the pact known as "the Paris agreement" is approved, countries would be committed to keeping the rise in global temperatures by the year 2050 in line with pre-industrial levels "well below" 2 degrees Celsius. (3.6 degrees Fahrenheit) and endure little" to limit them even more, to 1.5 degrees Celsius. That was a key demand of poor countries outraged by the effects of climate change and rising sea levels. The deal would also be committed to limiting the amount of greenhouse gases emitted by human activity to the same levels that trees, soil and oceans can absorb naturally, beginning at some point between 2050 and 2080.

Negotiators had a few hours to analyze the draft before going into a plenary meeting for possible adoption. French President Francois Hollande, who joined the meeting Saturday to add weight to the negotiations, urged them to approve it.

"The decisive agreement for the climate is born today," Hollande said. "France calls upon you to adapt the first universal agreement on climate. The deal, meant to take effect in 2020. (More on P5-03)

Ghani in Turkmenistan to Inaugurate TAPI Project

ASHGABAT - President Ashraf Ghani met with his Turkmenistan counterpart to Ashgabat on Saturday and discussed peace and stability in Afghanistan, bilateral cooperation in a number of fronts and other regional and global issues.

Ghani, who is on a two-day visit to Afghanistan's northern neighbor will also inaugurate the TAPI gas line project, which is a transit project for gas from China to India.

"I am pleased to announce that we are in the final stages of completing the TAPI project," the Afghan president said. "This project is not only for Afghanistan, it is a project for our region."

Ghani also said that the project will create jobs and boost the economy of the region.

"This project will also help us to become a transit state for China as well," he added.

Turkmenistan President Gurbanguly Berdymukhamedov, meanwhile, said his country supports any efforts to maintain peace and security in Afghanistan, and ensured Ghani of Turkmenistan's enduring cooperation with Afghanistan.

Speaking on the need for trade and economic relations between the two countries, the Turkmen president also expressed his readiness to increase the amount of electricity, by export to Afghanistan.

Meanwhile, Ghani expressed enthusiasm over linking Turkmenistan's gas to Pakistan and India, we hope to serve as a
