Carter in Afghanistan, Wears of IS Threat

KARUL - Following months of delays, the US has approved the deployment of Afghanistan tax revenues to the US, according to the commander of the US-led military coalition in Afghanistan. The decision was taken after a series of negotiations between the Afghan government and the Taliban. The US has authorized the deployment of up to 3,000 additional US troops to Afghanistan, bringing the total number of US troops in the country to around 15,000. This decision comes as the Taliban continue to expand their control over parts of Afghanistan, particularly in the southern and eastern provinces. The US has been working closely with the Afghan government to stabilize the security situation and facilitate the withdrawal of US troops. The decision to deploy additional troops is seen as a crucial step in stabilizing the situation and providing security to the Afghan people. The Taliban have been critical of the US decision, accusing it of violating the terms of the 2020 peace agreement. The Taliban have called for a negotiated political solution to end the conflict in Afghanistan, but so far, the negotiations have made little progress. The US has been under increasing pressure to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan, but the decision to deploy additional troops indicates that the US is committed to stabilizing the situation and ensuring security in the country.
