Ghani Promises Parliamentary Election Next Year

KARJU - President Ashraf Ghani pledged on Tuesday to hold a parliamentary and district council elections next year, as he sought to calm growing political turmoil that has hindered his government’s efforts against the Taliban insurgency.

Afghanistan’s five-year term was set to expire on June 22 this year, but elections were postponed because of security issues and disagreement on how to ensure a fair vote after a bitterly disputed presidential election last year.

"Parliamentary and district council elections will be held before the end of this year and at the beginning of next year," said Ghani in a statement, adding that the exact date would be for the Independent Election Commission to announce.

Ghani said he was likely to be held against a background of sharpening tensions with the Taliban, which has set on its agenda this year the impeachment of President Ghani.

KARJU - Afghanistan’s National Security Alliance (ANA) announced on Thursday that it would launch an offensive against Taliban and Taliban militants in the north of the country.

"An ANA operation has been launched in the north of the country," said ANA spokesman Zabi Karimi.

"The operation is aimed at eliminating Taliban and their Supporters in the north of the country," said Karimi.

Karimi said that the operation was launched in response to a request from the Afghan government to attack Taliban positions in the north.

"We have been coordinating with the Afghan government to launch this operation," said Karimi.

"We have been receiving intelligence reports from the Afghan government that the Taliban are planning to launch an offensive in the north of the country," said Karimi.

1) Ghani Promises:?

Afghanistan's new president, Ashraf Ghani, has announced plans to promote peace talks with the Taliban, but analysts say that the process may be difficult.

Ghani, who took office on September 27, has said he will work towards a "peaceful and friendly" Afghanistan.

"We are in the process of implementing a comprehensive strategy for peace and dialogue with the Taliban," Ghani said in a speech to parliament.

However, some analysts warn that the process will be complicated.

"The Taliban are not going to give up without a fight," said Harvard University professor Thomas J. Christiansen.

"They are a very well-organized group with a lot of resources at their disposal."

Ghani's government has been criticized for its lack of progress in bringing the war to an end.

The Taliban have been fighting a war of attrition against the Afghan government for years, and analysts say that a negotiated settlement is unlikely to be achieved easily.

2) Afghan Taliban:}

The Afghan Taliban have rejected Ghani's peace offers, saying they will only negotiate with the government if it is prepared to accept their demands.

"The Taliban will not negotiate unless the Afghan government agrees to our demands," said a spokesperson for the Taliban.

"These demands include the release of all Taliban prisoners from US and Afghan prisons, the withdrawal of foreign forces from Afghanistan, and the establishment of a government that is representative of all Afghan people."

3) Pakistan:}

Pakistan has expressed欢迎 to the new Afghan president, saying it hopes to work closely with Ghani to improve relations between the two countries.

"We are committed to working together to promote peace and stability in Afghanistan," said Pakistan's foreign minister.

However, some analysts warn that Pakistan may still be supporting the Taliban, and that a real change in the relationship between the two countries is unlikely.

4) Afghan Taliban:}

Ghani has also said that he will work to improve relations with the US, which has been a key supporter of the Afghan government.

"We are committed to working closely with the US to promote peace and stability in Afghanistan," said Ghani.

However, some analysts warn that the US may still be concerned about the rise of Taliban influence in Afghanistan.

The US has been a key supporter of the Afghan government, and has provided billions of dollars in aid to the country.

Norway Helps in Transporting 60 Tonnes of Enriched Uranium to Iran

(8/22) - Norway said Tuesday that it has assisted in transporting 60 tonnes of enriched uranium from Iran to a Russian reactor, in part as part of the agreement on Iran's nuclear program.

Norway, the principal supporter for the transport of the uranium from Iran, stated Monday that 60 tonnes of uranium, most of it from Iran, were shipped to a Russian nuclear reactor.

The agreement on Iran's nuclear program is unprecedented, it is critical that it is implemented, and I am confident that Norway has therefore helped to ensure that Iran's nuclear enriched uranium cannot be used in a military program, state the president of a member of the Russian nuclear program, said.

The move followed a meeting between Norway's Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg and Iranian Energy Minister Ali Akbar Salehi in Moscow on Tuesday.

Abadi Visits Ramadi to Celebrate IS Defeat

BAGHDAD - Iraq's Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi visited Ramadi, a strategic city that was recaptured from ISIS, to celebrate the defeat of the Islamic State group.

He said in a televised address that the city had been liberated, and that this was a significant moment for the country.

The visit comes as international attention turns to the fate of the remaining ISIS fighters in the eastern part of the country.
Police Refuse to Fight Taliban in Southern District

KANDAHAR - Afghan police are refusing to return to the streets of a volatile southern city after a bomb attack, claiming that promised government troops have not yet arrived, an Afghan official said Tuesday.

According to Kamal Amin, the district police commander of the neighborhood, the police are not fighting Taliban attackers for now. Singh is a major poppy-growing disaster in Afghanistan - the heart of the Taliban.

In response to the Associated Press, the police also denied reports that a military clearing operation had begun in the district. The Taliban attackers in recent days in the Singh district killed several police in the area. The police also claim that the Taliban have held several police posts in the area.
